PREMIUM CUT APPROVED

Hospital Insurance '$1-a-Day' Charge Gets Mixed Reaction

General satisfaction with the Social Credit government's $3 cut in hospital insurance premiums was voiced by Victorians today, but sharp differences of opinion greeted the new "dollar a day" co-insurance plan.

Main criticism of the Socreds' co-insurance system is that it could be much more expensive for hospital patients than the old system, and that it penalizes the large family and those with lengthy illnesses usually are less able to afford hospital bills.

Virtually everybody welcomed the $3 reduction in annual premiums.

"POLITICAL TRICKERY"

C.C.F. leader Harold Winch termed the charges "straight political trickery."

"Social Credit promised to abolish co-insurance. But in imposing a $1 daily charge, they have not abolished it. They have only shifted the financial burden onto the people who can least afford it."

Frank Snowsell, Saanich C.C.F. M.L.A., said: "On paper it looks as if Mr. Bennett has done something good. Actually, his plan is worse than the old plan where at least a patient knew the maximum he was going to pay."

LABOR VIEWS

Ed Haw, organizing secretary of the International Woodworkers and secretary of the Victoria Labor Council (C.C.L.), said that in its action the government has not complied with the Stevenson and Kellogg report on hospital insurance.

"The report, and the findings of the B.C.H.I.S. inquiry board, should become the basis for changes in the Hospital Insurance Act," Mr. Haw said.

"The $1 charge for every day in hospital defeats the principle of hospital insurance, which is to spend a period in hospital free of financial worry and leave without having to meet a bill," Mr. Haw said.

UNSATISFACTORY

Percy Rayment, secretary of the Victoria and District Trades and Labor Council (T.L.C.), said: "The $3 premium reduction is entirely unsatisfactory. It is not nearly enough. We have asked for a roll back of premiums to the original $24 a year for family coverage. We feel that is quite adequate.

"At the same time we are opposed to co-insurance of any kind, whether it's on a $1-a-day basis or anything else."

Jack MacKenzie, president of the Victoria local of the I.W.A., said:

"It seems to me most people desire complete abolition of co-insurance. I think most people would have been happier if they had reduced the premiums $3 as they did but not have introduced the $1-a-day co-insurance plan. I think, too, that this should be a compulsory insurance scheme and those people who work for the C.P.R. and B.C. Telephone companies should be made to belong instead of having their schemes of their own."

Frank Mitchell, Esquimalt C.C.F. M.L.A.-elect said:

"I oppose co-insurance of any form. What's going to happen to the semi-chronics under this new plan? Their bills will be staggering. It's a pig in a poke."

He conceded the reduction in premiums is a "step in the right direction".

"VICIOUS PRINCIPLE"

Captain J. D. Proudfoot, Victoria Liberal M.L.A., and a member of the hospital insurance inquiry board, said the new dollar a day system was a "vicious principle."

SOME GAIN, SOME LOSE BY NEW CO-INSURANCE

People who go to hospital for the average short stay will benefit under Premier W. A. C. Bennett's new $1-a-day hospital charge which replaces the old co-insurance charge.

But families where two or more are hospitalized in a year, or where one member sustains a long serious illness will be much harder hit financially than under the previous scheme.

This is because, under the former plan, the co-insurance charge was limited to a maximum of $35 in any one year, no matter how many times a person went to hospital, or how long he stayed. And it was collected only once from a family in a year.

Under the Bennett scheme a person must pay $1 for every day in hospital and every member of a family who goes to hospital must pay it.

The co-insurance charge wiped out by Mr. Bennett provided that a patient must pay (at Victoria hospitals) $3.50 per day for each of the first ten days he was in hospital.

After that there was no further charge.

Part of the reason was to discourage people from going to hospital unnecessarily, just because, as when the scheme started, it was free (except for the premium charge).

The new plan of $1 a day was considered by the Legislature at the time co-insurance was instituted two years ago but was discarded in favor of the $35 maximum scheme.

Here are some comparative examples of hospitalization costs under the old plan and Mr. Bennett's new scheme.

They include the premium costs per year with the co-insurance which would be paid in a year if sickness strikes.

Type of case	Premium	Co-Insurance	Total
Single person who has just a five-day stay in hospital:
Old Charge	$30	$17.50	$47.50
New Charge	27	5.00	32.00
Single person who has three months' hospital in a year:
Old Charge	$30	$35	$ 65
New Charge	27	93	120
A single person going to hospital twice in a year for periods of 30 days and 20 days:
Old Charge	$30	$35	$65
New Charge	27	50	77
A family where mother spends 10 days in hospital for maternity case:
Old Charge	$42	$35	$77
New Charge	39	10	49
A family in which the father and two children are in hospital during the year for 20 days, 15 days and 10 days (a total of 45 days):
Old charge	$42	$35	$77
New Charge	39	45	84
A family in which one member has a serious illness requiring eight months (248 days) in hospital:
Old Charge	$42	$ 35	$ 77
New Charge	39	248	287
An extreme case where three members of a family are hospitalized for three months each in a year:
Old Charge	$42	$ 35	$ 77
New Charge	39	270	309

CITY PLANS $10,000 ACTION AGAINST ENGINEER HAMILTON

A counter suit for approximately $10,000 will be filed in Supreme Court against Charles T. Hamilton by the City of Victoria, A. J. Patton, city solicitor, said today.

Mr. Hamilton, former Arena consulting engineer, Friday filed suit in Vancouver against the city for $9,212.

He claims it is the balance due for engineering services in connection with Memorial Arena.

When the bill was presented months ago the city refused to pay. Instructions were given the solicitor at that time to file a counter suit should a claim be made, Mr. Patton said.

The city contended Mr. Hamilton did not fulfill his contract with the city completely and lists items totalling "possibly more than $10,000," Mr. Patton said.

"The counter suit will be filed in due course," he added.

$1,000,000 LOSS IN B.C. MILL FIRE

Four-Hour Night Blaze Wipes Out Capilano Plant at New Westminster

NEW WESTMINSTER, Aug. 9 (CP)—A roaring fire early today destroyed the main mill of one of the largest shingle plants in British Columbia with loss of almost $1,000,000.

Firemen, aided by plant workers, fought unsuccessfully for four hours to control the blaze that wiped out the 30-year-old Capilano Timber Company main mill.

Flames cast a glow in the sky visible for miles. Burning shingles were blown into the air and landed miles away, dangerously close to residences.

About 350 millworkers, who returned to work two weeks ago after a seven-week strike, aided the firemen and some openly wept as they saw their jobs go up in flames.

The 350x90-foot main building destroyed would cost more than $500,000 to replace, W. A. McLellan, president of the company said. The loss also included 18 big shingle machines and miscellaneous machinery, six truckloads of shingles and one truck.

George Walker, night watchman, said there was no sign of fire when the night shift quit work at 1.30 a.m.

EXPLODED IN FLAMES

"I suddenly saw about 40 feet of the mill in flames and called the fire department at 1.42 a.m. The mill seemed to explode into flames."

The mill was working full tilt to catch up on shingle orders for the United States, late because of the strike of the International Woodworkers of America.

Several separate buildings housing boilers and turbines and eight dry kilns were saved.

Firemen report it was the worst fire in the area since 1939.

Contractors Reject L.R.B. Suggestion

Strike-bound contractors on the lower mainland and Vancouver Island today rejected a labor relations board proposal for settlement of the two-months' carpenters' strike.

The contractors met for two hours in Vancouver Friday to discuss the L.R.B. proposal calling for a 10-cent-an-hour wage increase for 3,500 strikers in New Westminster, Vancouver and the northern half of Vancouver Island.

No official statement was made after the meeting. At noon today, however, a spokesman said the Labor Relations Board had been advised of the contractors' rejection.

The spokesman said "the contractors feel there is no economic justification for upward revision of wages at the present time." The official indicated the contractors would hold out for renewal of the 1951 wage rate.

The carpenters' strike, followed by layoffs by the contractors, has made idle 5,000 additional construction industry workers and tied up work on major building projects.

Duke Eating Again After Stomach Bout

MONTECATINI, Italy, Aug. 9 (AP).—The Duke of Windsor had a steak for lunch today.

The appetite with which he ate indicated he has recovered from a minor stomach disorder suffered several days ago aboard his yacht Amazon.

Dr. Dante Pisani, in attendance, said he talked with the Duke's 85-year-old mother, Queen Mary, and assured her the Duke had recovered.

"She is very worried about her son," Dr. Pisani said. "She said she would send her personal physician to attend him."

Sir Daniel Davies, one of the Royal Household doctors, was to arrive by plane at Rome tonight and come to Montecatini to examine the Duke, holidaying here with the Duchess.

'WILL 15 PEOPLE HELP?' ASKS GRATEFUL MOTHER

A touching appeal by a young mother on behalf of the Red Cross blood bank was received by The Times this morning.

Red Cross officials have described the low stock of blood as a "desperate situation" and have arranged clinics for next Wednesday and Thursday at Red Cross House, Fort Street, in an endeavor to replenish it. They need at least 300 donors each day.

The appeal sent to The Times is self-explanatory. It follows:

Royal Jubilee Hospital,
Victoria, B.C.

Dear Sir:

On July 28, following the birth of a daughter, I was the unfortunate victim of an emergency operation, which saved my life. During the operation, and in the days following it, I was given a total of sixteen pints of Red Cross blood.

I feel very guilty that I should have had so much, when the Blood Bank is now so empty. My husband can return one pint next week; our children are still of pre-school age. Would fifteen people help me to show my gratitude to such a wonderful service by giving a pint each on my behalf?

I shall be home from hospital next week. If anyone wishes to telephone E 9968 and let me know that he or she has given blood on my behalf, at least I can say a simple "thank you."

I little thought anything like this could have happened to me. But it could equally happen to someone else's wife.

Yours very truly,
(Mrs.) D. MACFARLANE.

1900 King's Road, Victoria, B.C.

Mr. Hamilton raised th' roof, but th' city raised Mr. Hamilton—$1,000.

SUN TO SMILE OVER ISLAND FOR WEEK-END

Almost everyone, with the exception of forest workers, will be in favor of this week-end's weather, as predicted by weatherman William Mackie.

"Temperatures in the high seventies," he anticipates. "Warm and sunny. Light winds," he adds.

"There's a little rain up Prince George way, which could change the picture if it moved down to the coast, but that's highly unlikely."

High today and tomorrow, 80. Low tonight, 53.

Electrical Men Accept 10c Award

Members of the Victoria local of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers voted today to accept a 10-cent-an-hour pay boost as a means of settling their current wage dispute with B.C. Electric and Hume & Rumble Ltd.

The 10-cent raise was suggested as a basis for settlement by a three-man conciliation board which recently looked into the union-management stalemate.

Companies concerned have yet to announce whether or not they will agree to the 10-cent hike. Word from them is not expected until next week.

About 175 lower Island electricians are concerned. Most of these are employed by B.C. Electric.

In voting this morning, the men were not unanimous about following the conciliation board's recommendation. Minority faction held that the union should continue to press for its original demand of a 35-cent raise.

Vancouver electricians, who bargain jointly with those in Victoria, voted in favor of accepting the award on Friday.

If the companies agree to the proposal, journeymen electricians will be paid $2.21 an hour. The old rate was $2.11.

Bulgars Take Greek Shelling To U.N. Probe

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Aug. 9 (AP) — Communist Bulgaria charged Greece Friday night with "provocative" and "aggressive" action in shelling the disputed island of Gamma on the Greek-Bulgarian border. The accusation was made in a formal protest to the United Nations.

Foreign Minister Mintcho Neytechev cabled the U.N. that shells and mines fell on Bulgarian territory during the Greek army's attack Thursday on the tiny spot of land in the Evros River.

It was not clear whether he was charging that shells overshot their target and landed on the Bulgarian side of the river or whether he was referring to the island as Bulgarian territory. Both countries have claimed it.

The U.N. secretariat promptly sent Neytchev's protest to the Athens government. It also circulated the protest among the U.N. members.

Polio Claims Three More At Kimberley

KIMBERLEY, B.C., Aug. 9 (CP).—Polio claimed three lives in the Kimberley-Cranbrook area Friday, bringing this year's polio death toll in British Columbia to eight.

Two of the deaths occurred at Kimberley, a seven-year-old boy and an eight-year-old girl. The third child died at Cranbrook.

Five of the deaths have been in the Kimberley-Cranbrook district. A youngster died in hospital here Wednesday and a Vancouver salesman died in Cranbrook in July.

U.S. Hits at False Entry By Canadians

100 From Windsor Facing Deportation

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9 (AP) — The United States Justice Department is cracking down on about 100 Canadians it says obtained immigration visas through fraud.

Attorney-General James P. McGranery announced Friday that a deportation hearing will be held next Wednesday at Detroit in one case and "appropriate action" will follow in others. He did not identify the persons involved.

McGranery said an investigation showed the Canadians entered the U.S. and settled in the Detroit area. He said most of their visas were obtained through misrepresentations made to the American consulate at Windsor, Ont.

ASSETS FALSIFIED

Visa applications must show proof that prospective immigrants will not become public charges. McGranery said the Canadians apparently falsified information about bank deposits and bank statements.

"It appears," the department announcement said, "that these visas were obtained by presenting to the consular officials false information concerning bank deposits and supporting documents . . . the applicants knew that the information contained therein was false.

"The investigation has established that known persons in Canada aided and abetted these aliens in obtaining their immigration visas."

McGranery said the U.S. consulate at Windsor and the State Department co-operated with immigration officials in the inquiry.

Missing Boat Pieces Found

Two Victorians are missing aboard the halibut fishing vessel Jack Point somewhere along the rugged west coast of Vancouver Island, R.C.M.P. reported today.

Missing are: Roy Ngai, 32, of 128 Superior Street, and his brother, George Ngai, 34, of 933 Caledonia, members of a well-known Chinese family.

Police said the brothers have been unreported since they left Winter Harbor on June 8 for Victoria.

Wreckage found in a small cove near Zeballos is believed to be from the Jack Point. While there is no name on the wreckage, other distinguishing features make identification fairly conclusive, police said.

An officer from the R.C.M.P.'s Zeballos detachment is being sent to the cove to investigate the wreckage.

Mrs. Roy Ngai said her husband and his brother, George, left Victoria aboard their halibut boat about the middle of May for the West Coast of Vancouver Island. She said she had not heard from her husband since then.

"I still think they are safe," she said. "It is not unusual for them to be away for a long time when they are out halibut fishing."

Belgian Strike Against Draft

BRUSSELS, Aug. 9 (AP).—A general 24-hour strike called by Socialist and Communist union leaders as a protest against two-year conscription for Belgian army recruits took hold today only in spots.

The two-year term is an issue in Belgium because most of her fellow members in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization release conscripts after shorter periods of military service.

Semi-official estimates put the number of striking workers at 200,000.

The Communist-influenced Belgian General Federation of Labor had ordered its 500,000 members to quit work for the day. The rival Christian Union Federation told its members to stay on the job.

The strike, strictly political, reflected Socialist and Communist opposition to the draft law the government put through last year.

'I'm Homeless'

"Well, not exactly, because the S.P.C.A. is looking after me until I can find a new master, but the people here would be very happy if someone would drop around and take me home with them. They call me Garvie—I don't know who thought that one up but I suppose they meant well—and I'm 14 months old. My family tree (that's no joke either) shows that I'm part spaniel and part Labrador. They brought me here because I—you'll pardon the expression—'chase chickens,' but I'm sure it's only a passing fancy and I'll grow out of it. However, perhaps the next place I go to won't have any chickens so there's really nothing to worry about. I like children very much and I think they like me. The people here place about 30 dogs a month in new homes. . . . I'm the only guy around here who is still displaced, but if you call me at E 0514, maybe we can get together." (Times Photo.)

ONE WOMAN'S DAY

By NANCY HODGES

SEATS AND SING-SONGS

IF YOU HAPPEN to be interested in people, as I am, there are few more revealing opportunities of watching your fellow-humans than a C.P.R. boat during the holiday season. When I came back from Seattle a few days ago, the crowd on board was so great that the vessel was almost bursting at the seams.

Knowing that it would be, I got aboard early, only to find that many of my fellow-travelers had done the same, with the result that seats were quickly at a premium. However, I found one and sat down, and was quickly followed by two other women who proceeded to annex the two adjoining seats by placing papers thereupon.

ANNEXATION AND VEXATION

BUT THEY DIDN'T sit down. They went off to breakfast, after telling me that those were their seats and they didn't want them taken. I gently pointed out the framed notices on the wall of the saloon, advising passengers that the placing of impediments on a seat did not constitute a reservation.

However, like a good many other people whom I have met, they didn't consider such inhibitions applied to them. Such notices were intended only for "the other fellow." So off they went.

TWO HOURS LATER

IT WAS TWO hours later before they reappeared, and in the meantime I had to counter dozens of would-be sitters, who wanted to know if the adjacent seats were taken, by polite expression of ignorance. Finally an elderly woman who looked exhausted came along and asked the same question, and I advised her to remove the papers and take one of the seats.

The large and voluble woman who had "corralled" it in the first place was loudly indignant at finding it occupied on her return, but—largely, I am afraid, owing to my previous bolstering of her determination to stick to her right of occupancy—my tired old companion refused to budge.

SELFISH ATTITUDE

SUCH INSTANCES ARE by no means isolated, as any one who has done much traveling will agree. I find it hard to understand the mentality which considers it fair to "reserve" a seat with coats and parcels at a time when boats are so crowded with people who have all paid the same fare and are, accordingly, entitled to the same privilege of a seat. But that's just one of those things that make humans so interesting, if not always understandable.

After that experience of acerbity on the part of a passenger, it was warming to come across a gay party gathered around the piano outside the dining saloon, happily enjoying a sing-song.

NAVAL LEADER

A YOUNG CANADIAN naval lieutenant was seated at the instrument and around him was a bevy of young people, singing popular songs with evident enjoyment. I took a seat nearby to watch and listen to the fun.

It was amusing to see that crowd grow. Prosperous-looking American business men and their wives would come along and, looking slightly bored, stand for a moment or two as if about to pass on. The next thing you knew they, too, were joining in the choruses. Elderly men and women looked as if they hailed from mid-west farming communities drifted along, grinning as they heard old favorites, and, first thing you knew, they were singing away, too.

WIDE REPERTOIRE

IN NO TIME, that crowd had increased to 70 or more, and it was refreshing to watch how that strange assortment of people were quickly in unison in the bond of a sing-song. Incidentally, the repertoire was amusing and catholic in range, as the leader-pianist was prompted by his adudence.

I chuckled to watch sedate business men and their even more sedate wives going through the antics of "Old Macdonald Had a Farm" at a tempo which left them breathless, then suddenly switch to "Alouette," "Swanee River," negro spirituals, "Sweet Adeline," "Silver Threads Among the Gold" and all the other hardy old favorites with an enthusiasm which was infectious. I even joined in myself.

Lumber Contract Extension Given

B.C. Operators Welcome New Oct. 31 Deadline on $17,500,000 U.K. Order

Deadline for shipment of about $17,500,000 worth of British Columbia lumber to the United Kingdom has been extended for six weeks, a spokesman for the industry said Friday night in Vancouver.

Ralph M. Shaw, vice-president of MacMillan and Bloedel, said the deadline had been extended from September 15 to Oct. 31 on condition that operators accept $10 a thousand feet less for the delayed lumber.

Contracts for railway lumber materials such as ties are canceled.

Operators expect the extension to save them from $4,500,000 to $7,500,000. This represents from 45,000,000 to 75,000,000 feet of lumber which was not shipped before the deadline because of B.C.'s prolonged woodworkers' strike.

A cable received from the United Kingdom said that "it has been agreed in principle that B.C. lumber contracts which were cancelable due to non-shipment in June and July will be extended and the price will be reduced $10 a thousand.

Several Victoria firms could have been affected by any cancellation of the contract.

Lumber men in Vancouver said they will accept the British conditions and consider they are getting off lightly. One spokesman said the industry would not have been surprised if a $25 reduction had been asked.

Iranian Senate Delays Granting Mossadegh 'Power'

TEHRAN, Iran, Aug. 9 (Reuters).—The Iranian Senate, after a 2½-hour discussion, today decided to seek further explanation from Premier Mohammed Mossadegh before voting him the "total" powers already given him by the Majlis (lower house).

The senate appointed a delegation of nine to meet the premier tonight and discuss the question.

Three senators, including the premier's son-in-law, Matin Daftari, spoke against giving Mossadegh the special six-month powers for which he has asked. Daftari recalled that 20 years ago Mossadegh himself had opposed special powers being given to any minister.

Senator Abolfazl Lessani said that granting the powers was unconstitutional and would, in effect, put the legislature out of action for six months.

"How will you justify to future generations this killing of the constitution?" he asked.

Six Soldiers Die

BAD OEYNHAUSEN, Germany, Aug. 9 (Reuters).—Six British soldiers were killed and three more feared drowned during the British Army of the Rhine's "spearhead one" manoeuvres which ended Friday night, army headquarters announced today.

An officer and two men were listed as missing and presumed drowned during the crossing of the Rhine River, the feature of the exercise.

The Rhine was crossed twice in strength during the last 10 days by troops of the 2nd Infantry Division, commanded by Maj.-Gen. Basil Coad, former commander of the British 27th Brigade in Korea.

MAGAZINE SAYS SAUCER FOUND ON SPITZBERGEN

OSLO, Norway, Aug. 9 (UP)—An obscure German monthly magazine said today that a 46-jet Soviet flying saucer crash-landed recently on Spitzbergen Island, but the Norwegian air force scoffed at the report.

The magazine, known as Der Flieger and published in Munich, said "Doctor Norsel," a Norwegian, examined the saucer and described it as more than 150 feet in diameter, made of steel alloys and with an outer ring equipped with 46 jet engines.

The instruments bore Russian inscriptions, the magazine said. It said Norwegian jet fighters watched the aircraft crash in the snow on the Norwegian island of Spitzbergen, far above the Arctic Circle.

Norwegian air force headquarters denied all knowledge of the report and said it never had heard of "Doctor Norsel."

'OLYMPIAN DETACHMENT'

Guardian Slaps Canada's Wrist For Neglect of U.K.'s Problems

By ALAN HARVEY

MANCHESTER, Aug. 9 (CP)—The Manchester Guardian today reiterates that Canadians are so preoccupied with their own affairs they have little thought for Britain's financial problems.

The independent Liberal newspaper, which recently chided Canada for maintaining an "Olympian Detachment" toward Britain, notes today in a gentle, reproving editorial that not all Canadians appreciate such criticism.

Nevertheless, says the Guardian, the phrase "Olympian Detachment" expressed the mood exactly.

"It is easy to understand why many Canadians are merely impatient with the old world for being so persistently in trouble," says the Guardian. "A dazzling future of expanding population and wealth lies clearly before them.

"Oil and minerals have been discovered in vast quantities . . . new capital is pouring in, new industries are springing up. Montreal and Toronto, where the boom is being financed, are making money fast."

The editorial adds that it is not particularly sensible for Canadians to take the attitude that nothing can be done about Britain until she has "reformed."

"Canada still needs the markets of the old world . . . Is it really believed in Ottawa or Montreal that world trade would flow freely again and currencies would become easily convertible if only Britain earned her keep?"

The Guardian editorial reflects a difference of approach to Anglo-Canadian financial problems that has become apparent from time to time in the postwar years.

As seen here, the general Canadian view is that Britain is using the sterling area, and other devices, as an artificial shelter from the competitive realities of world trade and that the shortest solution lies in deflationary measures. Britain's reply is that the situation is a good deal more complicated than such an analysis would suggest.

Federal Surplus $248,000,000

OTTAWA, Aug. 9 (CP).—Finance Minister Abbott overestimated his 1951-52 budgetary surplus by more than $100,000,000, a final treasury report disclosed Friday.

The report showed that government income was lower and spending higher than anticipated, producing a government surplus for the first year of $248,000,000. The fiscal year ended March 31 last.

The surplus was $108,000,000 lower than the $356,000,000 estimated by Mr. Abbott in his April 8 budget speech, but it was more than eight times greater than the $30,000,000 forecast at the beginning of the last fiscal year, which began April 1, 1951.

Mr. Abbott, in a statement today, said that final government revenues actually totaled $3,981,000,000, down $22,000,000 from the April 8 estimate of $4,003,000,000.

CHANGE IN SYSTEM

Government expenditures climbed to $3,733,000,000, up from the previous estimate of $3,647,000,000.

Mr. Abbott said the drop in revenues was caused by lower tax income. The increase in spending — $86,000,000 — was the result "almost entirely" of charging interest on the national debt on a monthly basis, rather than on the old basis of semi-annually or annually. This was done to give a "better current picture of expenditures month by month."

The entire 1951-52 surplus was applied to reduce the national debt. The net debt at the end of the last fiscal year was placed at $11,185,000,000, down from $11,433,000,000 in the previous year.

PERON WALKS BARE-HEADED AT FUNERAL

Wife's Carriage Drawn by Workers

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 9 (AP) — President Juan D. Peron marched bare-headed under a rain of flower petals in solemn procession today behind the body of his wife, Eva, through the centre of Buenos Aires to the national capitol.

Argentina thus began the final stage of 15 days of funeral honors for her first lady, equalling those normally reserved for a president dying in office.

The climax of honors heaped on the president's wife since her death July 26 will be reached when she is interred provisionally Sunday in the central building of the General Confederation of Labor, Argentina's master labor organization.

A gun carriage bore the mahogany casket along a 15-block line of march from the labor ministry, where Mrs. Peron's body has been viewed by thousands. It was drawn by 45 workers wearing white shirts with mourning bands and black neckties.

They marched coatless to typify the descamisados (shirtless ones) who formed the great political power of the Perons.

Crowds were slow in gathering and—an hour before the procession started—Peron's press office broadcast every few minutes over a country-wide hookup of all radio stations an invitation for the public to assemble along the line of march.

Hundreds at Rites For Noted Publisher

TORONTO, Aug. 9 (CP)—George McCullagh, who rose from newsboy to publisher of two Toronto daily newspapers and died Tuesday at 47, was buried Friday.

His funeral at St. Paul's Anglican Church, attended by hundreds of persons, contrasted in its simplicity with the colorful career of the publisher of The Telegram and The Globe and Mail.

An old friend of Mr. McCullagh, Archbishop R. J. Renison, conducted the service. There was no eulogy or sermon. Mourners who found places in the crowded uptown church—hundreds were turned away—heard the formal service for the burial of the dead as contained in the Anglican Book of Common Prayer.

What's Your Opinion?

By DAVE STOCK and IRVING STRICKLAND

Are Victoria drivers bad drivers and, if so, what is their worst bad habit?

Al Campbell, radiator mechanic, Island Radiator Works, 501 Obed Avenue—"I wouldn't say they were poor drivers; although there are times when I'd probably give quite a different answer. The worst habit of Victoria drivers that I've noticed is that they don't stay in their right lanes. They turn left from inside lanes and right from outside lanes. It's something you see nearly everytime you drive downtown. I don't know what the trouble is! Maybe if more lanes were painted on the streets, more people would get into the habit of driving in lanes."

Mrs. Elsie Pugh, clerk, Individual Cleaners, 617 Harbinger Avenue—"There are some bad drivers around but I don't think it's so much the older folks—it's the younger ones. They jump into their cars; rev up the motor, and go tearing off around corners at such a pace the tires scream. A person driving at a proper speed doesn't let that happen. But it's the sort of thing you see every day. That's the thing I've noticed most around Victoria."

Jim Morrison, electrician, Quadra Electric, 1026 Hillside Avenue — "I don't think they are any worse here than anywhere else. Some of them like to hurry but you find those drivers everywhere you go. There are a lot of bad driving habits, all right. One thing I've often commented upon is the number of small cars which drive around with their mechanical signal arms out all the time. They go along for blocks with the signal showing and you don't know whether they are going to turn or not."

Miss Marjorie Browett, clerk, Canadian Pittsburgh Industries Ltd., 2635 Blanshard Street—"I wouldn't say they were all good but they aren't all bad. A lot of drivers here travel too fast. Most of the driving mistakes, though, are made by young, inexperienced drivers. Most of the older drivers are pretty careful. I think it would improve general traffic conditions if there were more traffic signals at some of the busier intersections."

Wilf Wilson, proprietor B.C. Sound and Radio Service, 2060 Carnarvon Street — "The worst driving feature that I've noticed is that so many people have broken arms they just can't make signals. They turn in all directions and stop all of a sudden without giving any warning at all to other drivers. Other than that, the driving here isn't too bad. I spend a lot of time in the truck and I'm still around to tell about it. You've got to have lots of patience to drive in this city but if you have that, and keep a sharp look out, you'll get along all right."

Reforms Given By Duplessis

QUEBEC, Aug. 9 (CP)—The Quebec government will keep hardened criminals segregated from young prisoners and first offenders at Montreal's Bordeaux jail, scene of two riots in the last three months.

Premier Duplessis indicated this would be the first of a series of reforms when he told his regular press conference Friday that this segregation was a "necessary reform."

He criticized newspapers for giving wide publicity to last week's riot, and said they were the kind of thing that "mignt constitute an encouragement for the rebellious criminal."

Damage during the last riot was "very considerable," he said, but gave no estimate.

Sheffield C.O. Leaving Here For NATO Post

Calls World Force 'Glimpse of Sanity'

By MONTE ROBERTS

Vice-Admiral Sir William Andrewes, commander-in-chief of the America and West Indies station, visiting here in his flagship, H.M.S. Sheffield, will leave the ship at the end of her B.C. visit.

He will serve as deputy supreme commander, Atlantic forces, during large-scale exercises to be held this fall by fleet units of NATO nations.

Admiral Andrewes, whose 37-year Royal Navy career has carried him wherever the flag flies, believes that NATO is a "glimpse of sanity in a troubled world."

"It includes the sensible nations of the world, and if there is anything in the world designed to prevent war, it is the combined strength of sensible people," he stated.

"Our object should be to get our strength up to the point where a challenger would know he was signing his own death warrant to attack."

FULL-STRENGTH TEAM

Admiral Andrewes likened the member nations of NATO to a football team, "on the ground with their boots on, and properly dressed, ready to play the game. In the past, we have played short-handed, with players coming in and falling out during the first years of the war."

H.M.S. Sheffield, commanded by Commodore J. C. T. Inglis, is on a summer good-will cruise lasting from July 1 to Oct. 12. She will make 15 ports of call, leaving here Friday for a four-day visit in Comox before proceeding to Vancouver.

The ship is open to the public this afternoon and Sunday afternoon. A full program of sports and entertainment has been arranged by the Royal Canadian Navy for the visiting officers and crew.

The ship's cricket team will meet Victoria City at Beacon Hill Park at 2 p.m. Sunday, and at 3 p.m. the soccer team will play Victoria United at Macdonald Park.

U.S. JUSTICE DEPARTMENT today assured 49-year-old Karl Assari Latva that, unless the F.B.I. turns up new evidence against him, he will not be deported to his native Finland for unwittingly joining the Communist party 18 years ago. Latva was ordered to leave the U.S. after admitting he joined the Communist party for four months in 1934 and paid 90 cents in dues. He said he thought he was joining a union that would help him win a textile strike then in progress.

BRITISH PROTEST BACKED

Japanese Navy Man Hits Court Action

TOKYO, Aug. 9 (AP)—The British demand for surrender of two British sailors convicted by a Japanese court drew strong support from unexpected quarters—former Japanese imperial navy officers.

Dr. Fuji Enomoto, former top naval lawyer, told a press conference Friday it was against "international custom" for a Japanese civil court to try British sailors. Other former high naval officers agreed.

Peter T. Stinner and Derek Smith, both 21-year-old crew members of the cruiser Belfast, were convicted Aug. 5 by the Kobe district court of stealing a Japanese taxicab and 1,700 yen. They were sentenced to 2½ years in prison.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden lodged a strong protest with the Japanese government and demanded the sailors be turned over to British military authorities. Nearly all Japanese newspapers editorially urged the government to spurn the protest.

Dr. Enmoto, 62-year-old international law expert, declared that Britain was right. He said Britain "never tried Japanese sailors involved in a similar case" while he served the imperial navy as legal adviser and professor from 1915 through the Second World War.

"Foreign governments during the 30 pre-war years always handed over misbehaving Japanese sailors to Japanese court martial," Dr. Enmoto said.

Meanwhile, Japanese lawyers who defended the sailors said they have decided to appeal to a higher court. British Consul Woodford Booth, however, said he would not appeal. Presumably an appeal would amount to recognition of Japanese jurisdiction.

Easterners Dominate Canadian Cycle Meet

WINNIPEG, Aug. 9 (CP)—Two easterners dominate the field today as the three-day Canadian track cycling championships wheel into the final day.

Pat Murphy of Delhi, Ont., has pumped his six-foot frame and featherweight cycle into a two-point lead for all-round champion honors.

Runner-up — with a good chance of edging out Murphy—is Toronto's Art Johnston, with 20 points. Winnipeg's Bill Bullman trails with seven points.

New Suspect in Murder Of British Nobleman

FORCALQUIER, France, Aug. 9 (UP)—Search for the killer of Sir Jack Drummond, his wife and 11-year-old daughter centred today on a foreign-speaking motorcyclist.

Two persons placed the suspect at the scene only a half hour before the shots were heard Monday night which killed Drummond and his wife. Their daughter, Elizabeth, was bludgeoned to death.

Unidentified Subs In Philippine Waters

MANILA, Aug. 9 (AP)—Unconfirmed reports reaching here today told of unidentified submarines being sighted in Philippine territorial waters.

Similar reports have been made from time to time.

The Philippine news service said the latest report came from Cmdr. Ramon Alcaraz of Philippine naval ships patrolling around the Sulu Archipelago.

None of the previous submarine reports has been officially confirmed.

HOSPITAL INSURANCE

"The poor person who is in hospital a long time, and can least afford to pay, is the one who gets stuck for the big bill," he said. "This is not keeping the Social Credit pledge that co-insurance was going to be removed."

Arthur Ash, defeated Liberal in Saanich, said he thought Mr. Bennett should have studied the hospital insurance inquiry board report before making the changes.

"What Mr. Bennett has actually done is increase co-insurance. Families now must pay $1 for every day in hospital with no maximum. The old plan was paid only once a year and no family had to pay for more than one person in a year.

"The premier is not consistent. He was one of those who criticized and voted against co-insurance. It was one of the reasons he gave for leaving the Coalition government," said Mr. Ash.

He added that the premier has repudiated his pledge to the people to put hospital insurance on a voluntary basis.

Mrs. Nancy Hodges, Victoria Liberal M.L.A. elect, said:

"This is an answer to British Columbians who kicked about the $35 maximum co-insurance. Now it could cost them $365 a year."

Municipal leaders had varied opinions.

Acting Mayor Frank Mulliner opposed the dollar-a-day co-insurance system because it will hurt the "poor bloke" who is in hospital for a long time. He didn't think the principle of hospital insurance should be changed.

"Let's give it a try, though," he said.

Saanich Reeve J. W. Casey said the dollar-a-day plan could easily cost a person a lot more than the old system. A man with a family may find himself up against it, he said.

Oak Bay Councillor George Murdock felt the new co-insurance plan will be more expensive than the old.

"The premium reduction, of course, is good. I think they could have left the premiums the same and abolished co-insurance completely," he added.

Esquimalt Reeve A. C. Wurtele said the new policy "sounds like a good scheme."

"Time will tell," he said.

Opinion of the majority of doctors appeared to be that the Socred plan will benefit acute cases, but work hardships on persons suffering from lingering illnesses.

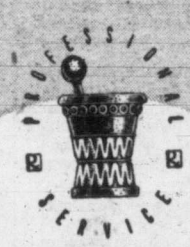
IN THE LIGHT OF EXPERIENCE



Sir Michael Foster once wrote: "It is one of the lessons of the history of science that each age steps on the shoulders of the ages which have gone before. The value of each age is not its own, but is in part, in large part, a debt to its forerunner." And so, to the fathers of modern pharmacy and other sciences as well, a debt of gratitude is owed. We have followed in the light of our preceptors and have profited by their experiences and our own. We are prepared to render complete pharmaceutical service.

The Issues Emerge

AS NEARLY AS THEY CAN BE IN the confusions of a political campaign the issues of the United States Presidential election have been defined by the two great party conventions. Perhaps even more than usual many of those issues are phony.

The Democratic party proposes to win its sixth successive election by standing as the people's champion against the big interests. By the speeches of its leaders in the recent convention one would suppose that the Republican party would repeal all the social gains of the last twenty years, that, like the Bourbons, it has learned nothing and forgotten nothing, that it would plunge the country instantly back into the great depression. This obviously is a false issue since the Republican party has accepted most of the Roosevelt reforms and would not dare to repeal them even if it wanted to.

The Republican party, on the other hand, promises the public reductions in governmental costs and taxes which are quite impossible on the face of the budget. The cut of forty billions or fifty per cent in the budget, which General Eisenhower suggested in an unguarded moment, would simply mean the slaughter of many essential government services and the destruction of the rearmament program. No Congress would undertake such policies for a moment.

Between these two extreme views, as presented in the hysterics of national conventions, there is a real and profound issue between the parties.

The Democratic party intends to carry on the cost of government at least at the present level and to extend various services at heavy extra cost. It offers no hope of economy or tax reduction.

The Republican party, while it could not cut the budget in half, would attempt to whittle down some expenditures, at least to eliminate the huge deficit now accumulating, and perhaps to reduce taxes somewhat.

In other words, the quarrel between the parties is more a matter of pace than of principles. Another Democratic victory would continue or accelerate the present pace of expenditure, Keynsian economics and, doubtless, inflation. The Republicans would try to apply the brakes.

Secondly, there will be a large and vivid issue of personalities. Both parties have nominated formidable candidates, two of the ablest men who have contended for the Presidency in modern times, much abler than the candidates of 1948.

The Democrats are clearly so shaken by the emergence of General Eisenhower as a politician that they are desperately attempting to misrepresent him as an ignorant and rather dangerous military man, as the prisoner of the old guard, as an amateur who cannot hope to manage the government. The unfairness of this indictment will not be lost on the voters.

Mr. Stevenson shows by his first speeches that he is a scholar, as his administration in Illinois shows that he is a master of government. He appears, indeed, to be the most scholarly Democrat since Woodrow Wilson and he has something of Roosevelt's box office appeal. But he will be presented by the Republicans as the heir and prisoner of a corrupt Democratic administration, as the apologist of the mink coat era and as a reckless spendthrift who, with his party, will eventually bankrupt the nation.

Only in Wendell Willkie has the Democratic regime faced an effective critic up to now. It has found another in General Eisenhower. At the same time it has found a new leader who will lift the campaign above the whistle-stop technique of President Truman and conduct the debate on a high level of principle and scholarship. One of the great personal debates of American history is now beginning.

While the campaign will turn mostly on domestic issues, since both parties have largely accepted the same internationalist foreign policy, foreign affairs will play their part. The Democrats cannot accuse General Eisenhower of isolationism but they will indict half his party for the mistakes of its unreconstructed isolationists.

Mr. Stevenson has indicated this attack clearly by saying that there are two Republican parties, that Republicanism suffers from spiritual schizophrenia and that no such party should be trusted with the conduct of foreign affairs. This is a valid argument which General Eisenhower must answer by proving that he can make his entire party follow his internationalism.

If the campaign is bound to be confused, so the result is bound to be doubtful. The Republicans start with a great advantage in their candidate and in the age of the government. The Democrats start with a solid or almost a solid south and can win with only a few big northern states. Only a rash prophet would predict the outcome of such a contest.

Follow Knowledge Like a Sinking Star . . .

THE ASTRONOMER'S DELIGHT IN the canopy of the stars has always been difficult for the poet to fathom. For the man with the telescope ignores, or at least gives secondary place to talk of the jeweled vault of Heaven, the diadems of the night sky and such imaginative descriptions.

His appreciation—and who shall say it is not even deeper than that of the poet?—comes from mathematical consideration of the vast distances, the incredible masses and temperatures, and the absorbing factual evidence concerning the bodies in space.

Now the astronomers, whose telescopes have pushed far beyond the scintillating stars known to the layman and opened up the vast universes of many distant nebulae, have taken another step past those whose pleasure lies in the beauty of visible display. They have discovered radio stars—dark masses in the heavens that send forth not light rays but radio waves.

These waves, similar to those which carry our earth-bound communications, are more than a million times the length of light waves. They may be gathered in by large aerials and their messages read as best we can. Britain leads in this form of astronomy, and is about to start construction of a $1,200,000 "radio telescope" for further study.

The telescope will be in the form of a giant saucer, 250 feet in diameter and formed of steel ribs and wire mesh. It will be movable, to point to any part of the heavens, and from its use it is hoped to learn much more about these radio stars, the great stellar broadcasters.

There is much the visual telescopes cannot tell us, because of atmospheric difficulties, inter-stellar dust and other impediments. The radio telescopes escape many of these handicaps. We may expect new knowledge of the size and composition of the Milky Way, new facts on the blind spots in the skies, new information on the stupendous mystery of limitless space.

These things the astronomers will learn, or attempt to learn. But perhaps in the end it will be the poets on whom we must once more call to express them for us—to put in words the eternal human wonder at the glories of creation.

LOOSE ENDS

Bad Old Days

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

BRITISH COLUMBIANS may think it rather odd when a group of ten gentlemen and one lady, innocent of any experience, two of them not even elected and all of them together supported by a small minority of the electorate, take over our provincial government and, as a symbol of their power, seal up the executive chamber with an extra soundproof door.

Hutchison

But much odder things have happened in these parts. The advent of Social Credit is not nearly so spectacular and whimsical as the advent of the late Mr. Joseph Martin's government about the turn of the century.

ACCORDING to the legend which should be true if it is not, Mr. Martin, on being appointed as first minister of the Crown, walked down Government Street and gathered together a cabinet from among the passing pedestrians. Apparently he could not find enough ministers between the Parliament Buildings and the Post Office and called in an unknown gentleman who kept a candy store near Comox and another who had lived a solitary and anonymous life somewhere near Lillooet.

Nobody had ever heard of Mr. Martin's colleagues before but this didn't matter since everybody knew Mr. Martin as one of the ablest politicians in Canada. He was the entire government and required no assistance.

NEVERTHELESS, the new ministers quickly mastered the art of administration. One of them, having sold odds and ends of stationery to school children, was so fascinated by power that he went on a buying spree and purchased several carloads of pencils at a large saving to the taxpayers. They were using those pencils in the Parliament Buildings in 1920 and may still be using them.

UNFORTUNATELY the life of the Martin government was cruel, brutish and short. The whole legislature just walked out on it. Walked out on the Lieutenant-Governor while he was reading the speech from the Throne, while Martin glowered at his side, arms folded, mustache and beard bristling, a perfect por-Mephistopheles.

At least this stirring affair produced one immortal phrase. A newspaper editorial referred to the King's representative, trussed up in his gold braid and cocked hat, as "the obese and shining monster." No editor writes prose like that nowadays.

THE OBESE and shining monster and all the scarecrows flapping about him have long since gone and our politics are insufferably dull. Members of the legislature no longer play leap-frog in the corridors, as was their custom (on the word of the late Mr. Justice Murphy, once member for Cariboo) when they were bored by some long-winded speaker. Nor are we likely to see again anything like that jolly occasion when Sir Ricard McBride and Mr. Martin both claimed the leadership of the opposition and when, as Sir Richard rose to speak, Mr. Martin seized his chair and refused to abandon it after a vigorous wrestling match, Sir Richard being forced to sit for the rest of the day on his desk-top.

THOSE were better days, or worse, according to your taste in politics. I would be the last to wish them revived and the first to praise the decorum, wisdom and high honor of our modern politicians. Still, one could do with a little more liveliness and animal spirits.

The Martin government came to office and left it with a shout heard around the world. Under circumstances just as improbable and chancy, Mr. Bennett comes to office with a whisper and even the whisper is carefully hushed by a soundproof door.

THE GAME of leap frog under the alternative voting system, by which a minority party suddenly controls the state under a leader who was in another party only yesterday, is doubtless more respectable than the corridor gambols of the old days. Our governments wrestle with ideas instead of muscles. Our monsters are no longer shining and obese. In short, we have emerged from a primitive frontier culture to modern civilization. Our politics have risen from the physical to the intellectual. A soundproof door has been closed on our youth. Our politicians have grown into the stature of statesmen but alas, they have also become deadly bores.

Seaside Home Presents Many Difficulties For the Crawlers, Clingers and Diggers

By DR. G. CLIFFORD CARL, Director Provincial Museum.

WHERE the sea meets the land a variety of beaches are found, the type depending mainly upon the kind of material exposed to the water and upon the amount of protection it receives. Thus we find at least four kinds of beaches along our shoreline; rock, boulder, sand and mud. Often two or more types will be closely associated as when boulders or sand are exposed at the base of a rock bluff or a rocky promontory marks the limit of a sand or mud beach. In any case living conditions vary markedly in these four types of habitats, consequently we find that each supports a characteristic marine community of plants and animals.

Carl

On the rocky type of shore living creatures are found only in the cracks and crannies where it is possible for them to get a "foot-hold" and at the same time to escape from the direct effect of the surf.

Bladder-wrack, sea-lettuce and many of the "mossy" types of seaweed find anchorage here. Among the animals, barnacles, mussels, limpets, chitons, and fan-like colonies of moss-animals are present, each one with its own peculiar type of shell for protection.

Concavities in the rock which trap the receding waters may shelter other forms including hermit crabs, oyster drills, sea-urchins and other creatures which cannot live out of water for any length of time.

Wave action is no light matter; it is probably the main factor determining the presence or absence of living forms on exposed beaches.

In a moving body of water such as a wave the ability to carry objects with it follows definite physical laws. For example, doubling the speed of a wave or current which can just move a small pebble allows it to carry a rock 64 times the size. Expressed in another way, a storm wave four times as high as a normal wave can dislodge a rock over 1,000 times as heavy as can an average wave.

Boulders offer more protection than rock, especially where cavities exist beneath the masses of stone. Here a greater variety of shore forms take up their abode, some permanently, some only at certain seasons.

Among permanent residents may be found shore crabs, cling-fish which attach themselves by an abdominal sucker, various tube-worms, certain chitons and occasional sponges.

Temporary inhabitants are male singing-fish guarding masses of pea-sized eggs attached to a rock ceiling, young stages of red rock-crabs, spawning whelks or oyster-drills and other creatures which may move onto the beach at certain seasons for special purposes such as egg-laying.

On sandy shores the inhabitants must be specialized for living in a shifting medium. Only a few plants are found, mainly eel-grass with well-developed roots; the animals are mostly burrowing forms with special equipment for "digging-in."

Clams, each with a muscular, wedge-shaped foot which can be used for cutting a channel through the sand, worms with strongly contractile bodies or with mucous glands capable of moulding a protective tube of sand grains, sand-dollars with numerous movable spines for excavating shelters and even fish like the sand-lance with a pencil-like body and sharp snout for burrowing—all these are found in this unstable world.

Many have devices designed to prevent sand from entering the gills or other vulnerable spots. All must be prepared to withstand a "sand-blasting" during storms when sand grains carried by the troubled waters introduce another hazard because of their abrasive action.

In mud habitats, usually at the heads of long bays and inlets or around estuaries, living conditions are much more stable. Permanent burrows are formed for shelter with much less chance of being disturbed and abundant food is available in the form of detritus and other decaying material which settles out from the quiet waters.

Various species of clams are found here; mud-shrimps which look like miniature lobsters, mud-loving worms with non-paying crab guests and even small fishes called gobies spend their life in this environment, their under-surface activities indicated by countless holes and hollows in the mud's slick surface.

No matter how wave-battered, no matter how barren-looking, no part of our coast is completely without life.

SKULL AND CROSS PURPOSES

Might I just state in reply to Mr. S. A. Whitfield of Parksville who in your issue of Wednesday, August 6, asks if that "unearthed skull of the past of 900 c.c. capacity was from a child or an adult," that if human history began as he and Mr. Lambert have stated less than 6,000 years ago as per the biblical account of the creation of the first man and woman, then there are no prehistoric skulls to unearth.

CYNICISM AND DEMOCRACY

Columnist Bruce Hutchison, in one of his undermining cynical blasts at democracy, says General Eisenhower hurriedly bought a farm to enable him to be photographed among the cows and pigs.

Undoubtedly the General could do better, by turning newspaper columnist, whereby his face would be in the paper every day. Do columnists' faces enhance their writings? If so, why not give readers a break by presenting these faces sideways, variety, a spice so needful to life, being almost extinct.

Mr. Hutchison's elaborate praise of Alastair Cooke as one of England's greatest writers, in spite of Cooke's so-called snobbish English attitude to the U.S., is all bosh.

Alastair Cooke has repudiated his allegiance to England. He's a naturalized American.

Cynicism is a deadly poison, destroying and withering up all that is good. Satire is beneficial and salutary, exposing evil and folly, so says the dictionary.

Democracy must dissolve into chaos, before theocracy can rule. Cynicism is as potent a dissolver of democracy, as any solvent that exists. It can spurt from a coloumnist's pen and can keep on and on like the brook, forever.

LIQUOR EVILS

If it is not taking too much space I would like to express my opinion on the liquor business which is the downfall of so many young men and women, too.

Anyone can see that although they say, "you can't take our liberty from us," it is evident that when they do wrong while intoxicated, they soon have their liberty and good name both taken and they cannot hold a job.

It seems to me the government is responsible for all the crimes committ by liquor which they license so muc.. to their profit.

If this helps them see their mistake I will be glad.

Please do not spoil your excellent paper by such appalling three-column headlines as Tuesday's "Admitted Killer Pays With Life on B.C. Gallows."

Or if you think most Canadians like this sort of thing, why not get your editor, Mr. Bruce Hutchison, to attend the next one and let us have an illuminating article? He could urge a grandstand free for relatives, all prisoners attending as a warning, with reserved seats for spectators and television rights bringing in quite a sum for the next budget.

And then send your paper on to the Russian legation as an example of the heights to be attained by education in all democratic countries.

PERSONALITY

The religion of the materialist has as its basic credo the affirmation "There is no God."

Is it too much to ask that he attempt to prove the belief he is continually thrusting upon us. How does he know there is no God. He may say that his scientific system does not require a God. But this is no proof there is not one. He advances theories of eternal matter, spontaneous generation, etc., as a substitute for the idea of a creative God.

One of the basic laws of thought is that for every effect there must be a sufficient cause. The greatest effect we know of is the universe. We know, through the medium of scientific investigation, that it is inconceivably vast; that it is tremendously reasonable, being governed by what we call natural laws; and that it contains persons who possess intellect, emotion and will.

The cause then of this effect must be inconceivably great, exceedingly reasonable, and possessed of intellect, emotion and will. This great, reasonable personality we know as God.

Until proof is forthcoming we are not prepared to accept the railings of the occasional materialist as a substitute for the age-old, world-wide belief in a Supreme Being.

From Oddity to Necessity Within a Lifetime

THEY probably laughed when Nicholas Cugnot started his self-propelled carriage steaming along a French road at two and a half miles an hour in 1770. They probably laughed, too, when it stopped every 100 feet or so while more steam was generated by its clumsy engine. The horseless carriage appeared to have its limitations.

They were probably still laughing in 1895 when motorcar production was stepped up to four machines a year, though they may have only smiled in 1900, when world production figures reached 5,000.

And now the mechanical joke of an earlier century is rated an essential on the basis of a recent impressive survey financed by the Canadian Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

The survey shows that:

Only 9 per cent of the driving done by the average motorist is for pleasure.

Only 17 per cent of the millions of miles driven can be called non-essential—and that includes using the car to go to the movies, the ball game or visiting.

The other 83 per cent is declared essential travel of one kind or another. (The definition of "essential" is not given in The Financial Post summary of the survey from which the above figures are taken.)

Almost half the Canadian population—6.5 million—use a motor car in an average week; and nearly half the employed persons in the country, roughly two million, use a car for earning a living.

TWO-CAR FAMILIES

Approximately six out of every 10 Canadian families own one or more cars. British Columbia has the highest rating for two-car families. And nearly half the privately owned cars in the country are 10 year or more old.

According to the survey nine out of 10 Canadians use a car for some purpose or other in the course of a three months period. About 3.5 million adult Canadians ride one every day and twice as many use that form of transportation in a week.

Replies to the survey group's questions indicate 41.7 per cent of the working population uses cars to get to and from work. Another 23.5 per cent walks, 14.4 per cent rides streetcars and 13.2 per cent buses.

While professional people, managers, proprietors and executives get most use from their cars, they are by no means top-heavily reserved for the luxury class. The majority of owners, 65 per cent, are in the income bracket under $3,000 a year.

Cost figures show labor currently 142 per cent about that of 1939 in the car production field and material costs up 128 per cent. Yet the prices of cars, before taxes, have advanced only 30.4 per cent, a fraction less than the general cost of living rise in that time. But the taxes make a difference. They put the price tag at 126.6 per cent of the 1939 figure.

Last year those taxes netted the Canadian government $144 million, a figure due for some reduction this year as the result of the cut in the excise tax.

The Financial Post, from its study of the survey, comes to the conclusion that "despite what the taxmen say, the automobile is an essential and integral part of the fabric of Canada's economic and social life" -a point it strengthens by quoting a leading automobile industry spokesman who declares cars have become the No. 1 factor in the Canadian economy.—A. Recollections of a Coronation Day

By HARRY P. HODGES Former Editor-in-chief of the Victoria Daily Times

HALF A CENTURY IN THE LIFE OF a nation is but a moment in the march of history. Half a century in the life of the ordinary mortal is usually more than half of his or her lifetime.

These statements may be permitted to serve as an introduction to what I propose to recall:

On August 9, 1902, 50 years ago, my tutor and I arrived at Frankfurt-am-Main from Nuernberg at 10 o'clock in the morning. It was a gorgeous day. The square in front of the Hauptbahnhof was a blaze of color. Flowers were everywhere. The Hotel Bristol, mecca of tourists from Britain and from many other parts of the world, was ready for its cosmopolitan customers.

We had journeyed north to spend a day or two in Goethe's birthplace to celebrate the coronation of His Majesty King Edward the Seventh.

Though several years my senior—I was then in my 19th year—my guide, philosopher and friend, a native of southern Saxony, agreed that he was sufficiently internationally-minded, having lived in Britain for a year or so, to join me in displaying a Union Jack.

Strange as it may seem, I had purchased a dozen miniatures of the grand old emblem at a small shop in Markneukirchen, a pretty town about 30 miles west of Prague, before we had set out on our journey of celebration.

But trouble was ahead. It began when we emerged from the Hauptbahnhof in Frankfurt. We, both of us by instinct, since we both knew the city, gravitated to Kaiserstrasse.

A quarter of a mile distant was the Frankfurter Hof—the home of good food and all that went with it.

Then it happened. Half way down Kaiserstrasse I spotted an officer of the army of His Imperial Majesty Wilhelm Hohenzollern.

I was walking near the curb. So was he. He looked arrogant. So was I. However, he was about six feet two. I was in the knee-high-to-a-grasshopper class. Still, I decided not to give way. So did he. I lost.

Fortunately for me, the British Consul-General in Frankfurt-am-Main at that time was a friend of my father, and since a policeman was glaring at me for daring to insult the uniform of His Imperial Majesty the Kaiser, I had no compunction whatever in asking permission to get to a telephone and suggest that on this auspicious occasion in the history of the British realm he come to my rescue.

He did it with alacrity. He had once dandled me on his knee.

His advice was good. He said: "Now, you speak fairly good German.

"Apologize for your behavior (there was a twinkle in his eye) toward the Herr Oberleutenant. I'm sure he will accept it." He did.

Well, to use a coloquialism, this young giant in the flowing grey mantle of his regiment, turned out to be a "good egg." After honor had been satisfied, partly in the traditional European manner—just bows and handshakes, no duel, of course—he invited my tutor, Paul Israng, and myself, to dine with him at the Frankfurter Hof—our objective in the first place.

And I still have the dinner check which he paid and, in the custom of the country, signed in German script as follows:

"In memory of pleasant hours spent with Harry P. Hodges and Paul Israng in Frankfurt-am-Main on the occasion of a celebration for the coronation of His Majesty King Edward the Seventh, August the ninth, 1902."

And that was fifty years ago today.

THE CHURCH PAGE

Few topics draw as many letters to the Times letter column on the editorial page as the standing argument, "religion vs. science."

Correspondents on both sides are doughty fellows who return again and again to the fight, giving and taking gladiatorial blows with a relish that shows a natural ardor for battle.

Whittaker

That the controversy has wide and constant reader interest is attested by the fact that the occasional bystander is drawn in to throw an offhand punch from the sidelines.

This corner has no desire to enter the fray, but we would offer Mr. Whitfield of Parksville and the peppery Mr. L. J. Pepper a guide book on the subject which is well worth perusal.

It is "Scientism, Man and Religion," by Dr. D. R. G. Owen, associate professor of ethics and philosophy at Trinity College, Toronto, published in Canada by Ryerson.

The 'Religion and Science' Conflict

Dr. Owen's thesis is that true religion and true science have always fought on the same side. The controversies which have arisen are in reality controversies between "scientism" (or pseudo-science) and religion, or between "religiosity," (or pseudo-religion) and genuine science.

He says, in effect, that if a man's scientific concept conflicts with his religious faith then there is something wrong with either or both.

By pseudo-science or scientism he means the attitude which disregards the limitations which true science has always recognized in its method, the limitations implied by the empirical, quantitative mechanical and progressive principles; principles which can be applied to measurable things only, but which do not—except in the eyes of pseudo-scientists or scientolators—presume to suggest that matter is the whole of reality.

By pseudo-religion or religiosity he means the reification of natural forces, social structures and psychological projections.

In 200 pages he traces the role of scientism or the climate it has produced in the modern world—in the development of communism, Nazism, and capitalism. His finding is this:

"Materialistic scientism produced the Communist society, which is a type of economic collectivism. Naturalistic scientism produced the Nazi society, which is a kind of instinctual barbarism. Empirical scientism has given rise to a bourgeois society, which worships science, the machine, and the dollar. And just as empirical scientism must either deteriorate into complete skepticism or else harden into a dogmatic mould that resembles the other two versions, so also th eculture that it nurtures is faced with only two alternatives: either it will disintegrate in aimlessness and confusion or else it will petrify into some kind of 'scientific' mass society."

Such a quotation, of course, says too much in too little compass, but the book enlarges on this pronouncement with delineations on the whole "religious vs. science" controversy. It contains material for many more years of letters to the editor.

A 'Must' for Mission-Minded People

At a time when city pulpits are largely taken over by visiting clergy of considerable stature and reputation it is perhaps impertinent to suggest that one service will have paramount interest tomorrow, but those who are interested in mission work should not miss the final lecture by Mr. W. The Logan family is here from Africa, at the tag end of a tour which has covered the continent. Mr. Logan, his wife and seven children have a story to tell and pictures to show which will fascinate the most blase Victorian.

The service is at 7.30 Sunday evening, at 935 Pandora.

THE WEEKLY SERMON

Samuel the Realist

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D.

The story of Samuel, in the two great Books of the Old Testament that bear his name, presents, as I have suggested, some striking contrasts and interesting questions. And an outstanding question at the end of the story is whether Samuel succeeded, or failed.

That he succeeded, in so far as his personal life and integrity are concerned, seems clear. No stain is upon his acts or motives. Even in that blood-stained scene in which he hewed Agag in pieces before the altar (I Samuel 15:32), it was the execution of a perpetrator of atrocities, and it reveals the seemingly gentle Samuel in the character of a strong realist, scorning to put upon a subordinate the act of retribution that he deemed necessary. He made the bloody act an act of religion, and it will always be a question whether religion should be associated with violence. But are not modern executions by hanging, or firing squad, also marked by the attendance of chaplains, or confessors?

It seems clear, also, that Samuel restored a large measure of integrity to the religious life of Israel. The Ark of the Covenant was restored, when its enemies found it too dangerous to keep (I Samuel 5), and its restoration became again a symbol of a restoration of religious integrity. Samuel's leadership, for the time at least, seemed constructively sure and effective. Wherein, then, if he failed at all, did Samuel fail?

He failed, sad to say, in his sons, just as Eli had failed. There lacks evidence that the sons of Samuel were as degraded and licentious as the sons of Eli, but the evidence is clear (I Samuel 8:1-3) that they did not honor their father by walking in his ways, and they took bribes and perverted justice. That was failure enough.

It is evident that trouble began in that day when Israel rejected Samuel, the trouble that issued in the tragic death of King Saul upon the battlefield, and another crucial defeat for Israel (I Samuel 31).

The narrative itself is confusing. Samuel acclaims Saul as the choice of the people and the divinely annointed King, but in strangely contrasting words (I Samuel 8:10-18), he gives a dark and depressing picture of what is in store for the people in their turning from him, and impliedly from God, to their trust in a king. Once it was clear that the people were determined to have a king, did Samuel change his own attitude, and seek to surround the new monarchy with all the sanctions of religion? I cannot resolve the discrepancy, but the whole passages and incidents have very interesting bearing on the question of the divine right of kings.

A great philosopher when he was asked to appraise the character and career of a certain man, replied, and declined, saying, "I do not know his end." It was a wise judgment, and concerning Samuel it may be said at least his end showed a diminishing greatness, perhaps partly due to old age. It is in his whole career, with the full strength of his manhood and leadership in mind that he may best be remembered. He never failed in his integrity as judge and prophet, though he failed to achieve all that he had sought to do as a true patriot in Israel.

New Fast-Killing 'Gases' Announced In U.K. Journals

LONDON, Aug. 9 (AP)—Britain's supply ministry Friday described new "nerve gases" which can strike without warning and kil within seconds.

Its article, published in two principal medical publications—Lancet and The British Medical Journal—did not say who has the gases. Neither did it say whether they are practical for modern warfare.

"These gases are rapidly absorbed by inhalation of the vapor, absorption of the liquid through the skin and mucous membrane, or by indigestion (consumption) of contaminated food and water," the article said.

"A drop of the liquid in the eye or the inhalation of a high concentration of the vapor for a few seconds may cause incapacity or death within a few seconds."

U.S. Anticipates Complete Break In Drought Areas

CHICAGO, Aug. 9 (AP)—More showers moved toward the southern United States today and government weather forecasters looked for a complete break-up of the drought in that area.

Recent rains have eased drought conditions in New England and the southeast, but Arkansas, Missouri, Kentucky and Tennessee still are critically dry.

Widely-scattered showers sprinkled parts of Arkansas and showers were forecast over the weekend or within five days for most of the critical area.

Agriculture Secretary Charles Brannan said he does not believe the drought, which destroyed an estimated $1,000,000,000 worth of crops and pastures, will cause either a food shortage or a material rise in food prices.

Showers also occurred Friday in the upper Mississippi Valley and along the Atlantic coast. Fair weather prevailed in the far west and over much of the Rockies and great plains.

Cooler weather came to the upper areas of the midwest and along the middle Atlantic coast.

A leader in the field of religious education both in eastern Canada and the U.S., Rev. Harold G. Salton, M.A., or Hamilton, Ont., will be the guest preacher at both services in Centennial United Church Sunday.

It will be his only appearance here before returning to his pastoral charge in Hamilton, Wesley United. For the last month he has been occupying the pulpit for joint congregations of St. Andrews - Wesley and Chalmers United in Vancouver.

Rev. Mr. Salton taught at Columbia University and studied under John Dewey the great American philosopher and Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, famous preacher of the fashionable Riverside Church, New York.

At Centennial Sunday the guest preacher will speak in the morning on "God's Revelation in Natural Law" and in the evening on "Which Way to God." During the morning he will also give a brief children's talk, illustrated, on "Jesus Teaching for Youth."

Dr. John G. Mitchell of the Central Bible Church of Portland will preach Sunday at the morning and evening services of the Central Baptist Church.

The week just past has been memorable in the Calvary Revival way. Mrs. Rose Wong of Canton, China, has been the guest of Mrs. Spiers and the Calvary Revival way. Many hundreds thrilled to hear her message of the current events up to present.

Not only did she tell of the great work done in China, but also told of the hardships of the Chinese under the communistic regime. Her "spiritual, patriotic" stirred the hearts of all. There were many Chinese who attended her meetings.

Mrs. Wong received the approval of many officials of this city, and has promised to return next month in a city mass rally. Mrs. Spiers plans to join Mrs. Wong in a national tour of Canada.

The minister, Rev. Moir A. J. Waters, will preach at both services of the First United Church Sunday. In the morning the subject will be "The Glory of the Garden." This is the second in the series "Voices of the Great Creator." This service will be broadcast. In the evening Mr. Waters has chosen for his subject "To the Unknown God," second in the series "Scenes From the Life of Paul."

Guest preacher for both services at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Sunday is the Rev. David Porter, M.A., minister of Richview Presbyterian Church, Belfast, Ireland.

Mr. Porter is minister of the second largest Presbyterian Church in Ireland. He is a graduate of Trinity College, Dublin, and the Presbyterian College, Belfast. Mr. Porter also studied at Princeton Theological College, Princeton, N.J. He has traveled widely in Europe, Palestine and the U.S.A.

Michel St. Denis Accepts French Offer

TORONTO, Aug. 9 (CP) — Michel St. Denis, three times adjudicator of the Dominion Drama Festival, has accepted an offer to establish a theatre in Strasbourg for the province of Alsace, France.

Mr. St. Denis, in a letter to Herbert Whittaker, drama critic for the Toronto Globe and Mail, says: "I have been and still am, very divided in my mind. Canada had a very strong attraction for me, but I had to choose."

It was hoped, Whittaker reports, that Mr. St. Denis, who adjudicated Dominion Drama Festival finals in Otawa in 1937, Calgary in 1950 and Saint John, N.B., this year, would be able to continue his work in Canada. He was to have been asked to teach at the Little Theater in London, Ont., and the University of British Columbia.

Stevenson Names New Chairman

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9 (AP)—Adlai Stevenson today tightened his hold on the Democratic party in his race towards the presidential election, while Republican leaders, including nominee Dwight D. Eisenhower, tagged foreign policy as the prime issue.

Stevenson picked a close friend, Stephen A. Mitchell of Chicago, as chairman of the Democratic national committee. Thus, Stevenson put another lieutenant in a key position. The first was Wilson Wyatt of Louisville, Ky., named by the Illinois governor to head his campaign headquarters.

At Denver, John Foster Dulles announced that he, Eisenhower and the vice-presidential nominee, Senator Richard Nixon of California, agree foreign policy is the major issue of the campaign.

"The trend of our present foreign policies," Dulles said, "is to put our nation in the greatest peril it has ever been in (during) the entire course of our national history."

Dulles, one-time adviser to State Secretary Dean Acheson, said only Eisenhower's election could block Soviet domination and avert a third world war.

Sales Boy's 2 Corners Yielding Good Profit

One of the busiest and most enterprising members of The Times' junior sales force is 10-year-old Raymond Tillyer, of 310 Edward Street.

He's a real whiz at selling papers. So good, in fact, that he covers two corners at once.

His territory is on the uptown side of Government Street, at Fort. He takes care of both the northwest and the southeast corners.

"Most of the time I stay in front of the K Shoe Store because I've noticed more people go by there," he explains. "But if business slows down and there happens to be more people on the other side of the street, I go over to the C.N.R."

Raymond has full rights to both corners under the strange code observed by newsboys. If at any time another boy should take up a stand on the other corner, it is Raymond's legal right, under the code, to chase him away . . . if he can.

Raymond has had the Government and Fort stronghold for about a year, although he's been a junior sales boy for three and a half years. He averages about 50 papers a night.

About half his customers are regulars, many of whom greet him by name.

RAYMOND TILLYER

With his initial earnings, he bought bicycles for himself and his sister Marlene. Last Christmas, though, he sold his own bike, and now he uses his sister's most of the time.

TEE TOPICS

By BILL WALKER

The old sweats, specially the Seniors' Northwest Golf Association laddies, move into the tee picture next week with their 30th annual joust at Victoria Golf Club.

In recent years, Seattle's Ralph Whaley, the bow and arrowman, has dominated the event, capturing the title on eight occasions.

Gerry McManama broke Whaley's string in 1948, the only time that Whaley hasn't copped the honor since being admitted to the association.

Qualification papers rest on one's birth certificate, an age of 55 being necessary for eligibility.

Sectional play is based on five-year spans up to and including the 75 years—and—over classification in addition to the championship bracket.

Whaley's expected main source of worry, and it hasn't caused him any loss of sleep in the past, will be McManama, Ed Eisenhower of Tacoma, Seattle's Roy Campbell and Dr. Oscar Willing of Portland, the former Walker Cup player.

Following an international match Sunday between representative teams from Canada and the U.S., the tournament proper opens with an 18-hole qualifying round Monday. Match play continues through the week.

★ ★ ★

Host pro Phil Taylor has put in his annual plea for caddies. Past experience should tell the applicants the week could be a profitable one (if they get a winner).

★ ★ ★

From Vancouver and Gordon Bowers, executive member of the R.C.G.A., comes word that B.C. will be represented by 35 players in the Canadian Amateur August 25 to 30.

The Victoria entries are as previously announced, George Andrews, Vic Painter, Bob Morrison, Frank Scroggs and Jackson Walker.

★ ★ ★

Incidentally, Morrison proved himself a good sport by caddying for the Shamrocks in their golf party last week at Ardmore. A good time was had by all, Len Scott taking down first prize with a 78-28—50. (Giving credit where due: Jim Tang, from the morning sheet, won a prize. Morrison vouched for the authenticity of the score.)

★ ★ ★

Down in Edmonton the B.C. gals are having their troubles (Marj Todd's failure to show being the big mystery), but all is not lost as the Canadian Amateur follows the Close which concludes today.

★ ★ ★

Don't know how true it is, but a little birdie told us the following stories of why the women's tourney is called the "Close" and the men's the "Closed" and asked asked us to draw our own conclusions.

The first yarn is that women, using their prerogative, wanted to be different and thus dropped the "d."

The second, and it sounds feasible, too, is that a stenographer made the original mistake and inadvertently dropped the "d" and it's remained that way ever since. "Close" for the gals and "Closed" for the guys.

★ ★ ★

Cougars' Fred Hutchinson claimed the draw was "rigged" when he was paired against medalist Pat Frith in the Colwood Club handicap tourney. (P.S. It's Fred's first tourney, thus the concern.)

★ ★ ★

Sid Watson matched Len Scott's gross of 78 in the Shamrock tourney, but his handicap was cut from "22" to "two" before he teed off. Talk about being rigged! Chief of Police John Blackstock was a special guest.

A note from Dot Herbertson and Shirley Fry to Leo Derman doesn't mention golf, but says the Gorge kids had a wonderful trip to Edmonton, their first long jaunt away from home.

★ ★ ★

It happens to the best: Sam Snead took a seven on the second hole at Tam O'Shanter. His ball landed in a creek. Oldest competitor in the Seniors' tourney next week is expected to be Joshua Green, he of the high collar. Did you know that Skip Alexander survived a flaming air crash in 1950 at which time it was thought he would never play golf again. His ankle was broken and his head, arms and legs were seared into livid flesh. His three compahions were killed.

LATE BULLETIN—Leo Derman, Gorge Vale secretary, took time out from arranging draws Friday night to tour his own course. Everything went normally until he hit the 14th hole. There he picked up his No. 7 iron and canned his tee shot for his first hole-in-one in 20 years of playing golf. The hole is 145 yards long and is a par three.

Derman was playing with Les Holding, Reg Hoadley and Norm Hogan.

Wonderful Week Wasn't It Dear?

No titles came to George and Peggy Manset of Santa Barbara in the B.C. tennis championships which concluded today at the Victoria Lawn Tennis Club, but it didn't bother the happy couple. Married only five months, life was still a "love" set for the visitors, who Friday were eliminated in semi-final matches of the men's singles, ladies' singles and men's doubles. (See story.) (Times photo by Bill Halkett.)

Millmen Upset Gasmen, Aces' Victory Remains

Two decisions were reached Friday night at Central Park in the Senior A Men's Softball League semi-final playoffs.

First, B.C. Forest Products went one game up in their best-of-five series with Pitzer and Nex by talking themselves into a 6-2 win over the gasmen.

Second, Butler's Aces were awarded the 6-0 protested victory over Chinese Students on Thursday night, when the deadline passed and no written protest was handed into the league officials by the Students of the game Thursday played under protest.

Aces are now two games up in their series and rule favorites to take the Students in straight games.

The millmen lead P. & N. two games to one.

RUNS COME EASILY

Coach Bud Ross of Forest Products got a lot of verbal support from his bench Friday and the millmen played inspired ball after taking a 3-0 lead in the first two innings on one hit.

Barry Jackson opened on the mound for P. & N. but was the victim of shaky support from his infield. Shortstop Jimmy Morrison made three errors in the first two innings and both times they left Jackson in a jackpot.

In the first inning an error by Morrison left the bags loaded with two out, and Jackson walked Don Hendry to force in a run.

MARTIN TO RESCUE

In the second frame a bad throw by Verne Evans, two walks and a double error by Morrison left runners on second and third and brought on Norm Martin in relief.

One run resulted from a fly ball to right field and Charlie Sansbury drove in another with the first hit of the game for Forest Products.

Another error by Morrison resulted in an unearned run for Forest Products in the top of the sixth as they went ahead 4-0.

GAME MONDAY

Next senior A playoff action takes place in Central Park on Monday night at 6.30 when Butler's Aces and Chinese Students meet in the third game of their series.

Line score follows:

		R.	H.	E.
B.C. Forest Products	130 001 200—6	9	4
Pitzer and Nex	000 001 010—2	6	6

Two starry American players are finalists in the men's open singles of the B.C. Lawn Tennis championships.

Top-seeded Jerry DeWitts and second - seeded Fred Fisher hurdled the final barrier to the playoff in sparkling matches Friday night at the Victoria Lawn Tennis Club.

DeWitts triumphed over Paul Willey of Vancouver in straight sets, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4, in a best-of-five match. Willey was unable to make any effective passing shots against DeWitts who took every chance to play net, making many good cross-court volleys.

A marathon first set was the highlight of the match between Fisher and George Manset. Unable to break each other's powerful service, they reached 13-all before Fisher came through to win when Manset double faulted twice.

Fisher won the next two sets easily, making a final tally of 15-13, 6-2, 6-3. was 6-3, 6-4.

ONE UPSET

The only upset of the semi-finals was scored by diminutive Marjorie McCord, seeded fourth, when she eliminated top-seeded Mrs. Peggy Manset by scores of 3-6, 6-4, 6-2, in the ladies' singles.

Second - seeded Mrs. Muriel Kifer romped into the final of the ladies' singles by virtue of a clean-cut verdict over unseeded Mrs. Elizabeth Loecks. The count was 6-3, 614.

Both of the men's doubles matches went to four sets. Top-seeded DeWitts and Jim Livingstone set down the Vancouver team of Willey and Jeffery by scores of 6-4, 6-8, 6-1, 6-4. The unseeded Vancouverites put up a terrific fight, but the experienced Americans outplayed them.

Conway Catton and Jim Demas, seeded second, ran into plenty of trouble overcoming the combined serves of Fisher and Manset, who finally bowed out at 4-6, 6-4, 8-6, 8-6. In the final set, Catton and Demas several times had set point, only to lose it when Fisher or Manset let loose with sizzling serves in quick succession.

Playing in semi-darkness, the top-seeded McCord and Catton took the measure of Mrs. Loeck and DeWitts at 6-2, 6-3, while third-seeded Mrs. Kifer and Demas triumphed over Kay Staples and Willey to the tune of 6-2, 6-0.

DECISIVE VICTORY

Miss McCord and Mrs. Kifer, top-seeded ladies' doubles duo, administered a decisive drubbing to the local team of Mrs. Jill Kelly and Miss Tommy Elmsley by 6-2, 6-0. Mrs. Loeck and Lois Reid edged Vancouverites Mrs. Jean Bardsley and Miss Staples by scores of 8-6, 6-4.

Other semifinals results were:

Men's junior veterans' singles: Cantrell won from Brand, 6-3, 6-1; Finney won from Hart, 6-2, 6-4.

Junior veterans' doubles: Cantrell and Read won from Hocking and Brand, 6-3, 6-2; Finney and Hart won from Butt and Parker, 6-8, 6-2, 6-4.

Flights, ladies': M. Bray won from G. Dawson, 6-3, 6-4.

Flights, men's: D. Miller, walkover from Medin; Ted Smythe, walkover from Cecil Branson.

Junior girls': Salley Pollard won from Sue Butt, 6-0, 6-0; Sheila Kingham won from Belinda McConnell, 6-0, 6-0.

Junior boys': Cecil Branson won from Chris Pollard, 6-1, 6-3; Don Thomson won from Arthur Roberts, 6-2, 6-0.

INDIAN JIM THORPE IN BATTLE FOR LIFE

HENDERSON, Nev., Aug. 9 (BUP) — Big Jim Thorpe, the rugged American Indian who won both the Olympic pentathlon and decathlon in 1912, is fighting for his life at the Rose Dilima Hospital in Henderson, Nev.

The 64-year-old Thorpe collapsed at his Pittman, Nev., home Friday and was rushed unconscious to the hospital, where he has been placed under an oxygen tent.

Doctors say Thorpe suffered a heart attack but has shown some improvement.

Ontario Holds Huge Lead in Cricket Final

TORONTO, Aug. 9 (CP)—Ontario today appears well on the way to retaining the international cricket championship.

The Ontario II in a 3½-hour inning Friday declared with 282 runs for four wickets—highest figure posted in the tournament—and British Columbia had only 82 for four wickets when the day's play ended.

The match continues today and it is doubtful if the westerners can match the powerful Ontario batting.

R. Bruce-Lockhart of Oakville displayed brilliant batting and was not out with 32, including 13 fours. J. A. Gerard of Toronto hit 11 boundaries in a total of 80 before he was caught by A. Stead of Vancouver.

George Nugent of Vancouver turned in the best showing for British Columbia with two of the four wickets for 58 runs. Alan and Peter Stead of Vancouver each accounted for one wicket.

THIS TENNIS RACKET — By CHRIS BOTHWELL

The End of a Week's Work

By CHRIS BOTHWELL

The American aggregation dominated play throughout the B.C. lawn tennis championships, and made a clean sweep into the finals.

The tanned net exponents played some thrilling matches during the week-long tourney, highlight of the season at the Victoria Lawn Tennis Club.

The sun, which greeted the visitors on their arrival last Monday, has continued to shine; the draws have all run smoothly; and no one has wound up on the injured list.

The tournament committee, headed by Geoff Dawson, has once again run a most successful tournament. Contributing to this happy state of affairs were Mrs. A. Pitkethley, Mrs. G. Dawson, Miss Tommy Elmsley, Jack Parker, Harry Bateman, Al Cox, Bill Dunbar and Syd Hicks.

At the conclusion of the tournament, presentation of prizes was to be made by W. T. Straith.

There's no rest for the touring tournament gang . . . next stop, the B.C. Clay championships at the Jericho Club, Vancouver . . . Jerry DeWitts is ranked second in California tennis circles, and 1A by the army . . . he's expecting to be called up momentarily . . .

One hundred and five pounds of dynamite, that's Marj McCord, who hits a ball as hard as any of her sturdier competitors . . . Fred Fisher, who played in tournaments in B.C. in 1948 and 1949, is working on his thesis for his Ph.D. degree in physics from the University of Washington.

When she lived in Vancouver, Mrs. Muriel Kifer, now of Menlo Park, Calif., covered tennis and other sports for one of the daily newspapers. . . . Clint and Clyde Knox, identical twins, play together "as little as possible." This is the first time in three years. . . . Clint, who lives in Richland, Washington, never has been here before, while Clyde, of Portland, came up in 1949. . . . A promising California player, called the "Don Juan" of the tourneys, is 19-year-old Jim Demas. . . .

Peggy and George Manset have been married only five months . . . they've won a couple of mixed doubles championships and are both stars in their own right. . . . Jim Livingstone, a high school teacher in San Francisco, plays a superb doubles game. . . . The dapper Conway Catton is in his third year of dentistry. . . .

Paul Willey, the only Canadian to reach the singles semi-finals, is a master at converting shots which look like "sure losers" into winners. . . .

Marj McCord and Mrs. Muriel Kifer are in three final events. Mrs. "Liz" Loeck has been playing in Canadian tournaments since she was a junior, but this is her first in Victoria.

FASHION NOTES: Smartest gal's tennis costume was Mrs. Kifer's shirt 'n' shorts in off-white, with a turquoise band on her blonde hair. A few of the fellows are sporting tartan tams . . . right on the courts.

Father-daughter combination in the tournament: Jack Butt and pint-sized Susie who reached the semis in the junior ladies, while Jack made the semis in the junior vets doubles.

Lloyd Finney, who constantly smokes a pipe, proved that you can play tennis and smoke at the same time.

A duplication of names among the entrants added to the headaches of the draw committee . . . as if it weren't confusing enough with brothers Warsh and Don Miller, from Los Angeles, Victoria's "Doc" Miller had to go and enter too, (and Don beat "Doc" in the flights) . . . then there were Catton and Patton, and Mrs. Penley and Miss Henley . . .

On the social side, visiting players were entertained by the V.L.T. club at a beach party and supper out at Stan Gill's, on Elk Lake, during the week and of course the big wind-up dance will be held in the badminton hall tonight.

Tyees Win Again, But Few Fans Care

Chiefs Talk Too Much, Too Loudly

Victoria 10, Wenatchee 3

By BILL WALKER

Bill Prior hurled his fourth victory of the season Friday night as the Tyees rolled on towards the Western International League pennant, but few came to see the 10-3 triumph.

Less than 900 fans were conspicuous by their presence, but all could tell league president Robert Abel that the dugout language of the Wenatchee Chiefs doesn't make for good listening, even at a baseball game.

Plate umpire Mickey Hannick went as far as his authority allows (or did he?) in giving the finger to two of the more vituperative Chiefs, Bill Stites and Bud Hjelmaa, but still he didn't go far enough.

The Chiefs, at a low ebb statistically (they're last), financially (they're embarrassed), numerically (they've got but 14 active players) and in spirit, were much better at unparliamentary vociferousness, than at baseball.

The invectives they hurled with far more adroitness than is pleasurable, only accentuated the sad tale faced by manager Dick Adams.

NO RESERVES

With his club literally hanging by shreds and only three players performing in their regular positions, Adams was forced to inject two pitchers into the fray with Stites' (also a pitcher by trade) and Hjelmaa's expulsion.

A peculiar fellow, the baseball player, when there's nothing to gain for losing, which is not the least reason that such language should be allowed.

SMART TURN

But it took nothing away from Prior's performance, nevertheless, the rangy righthander having a one-hitter going until the sixth.

He faltered momentarily in the ninth to allow three of the six hits he gave up and Wenatchee's third run.

The Tyees jumped on Bud Bauhofer in the first inning for two runs, added a singleton in the second, a pair in the sixth, four in the seventh and one in the eight.

GLADSTONE HITS

Granny Gladstone led the 15-hit assault with a doubles and two singles, and drove in four runs.

Lu Branham, Bob Moniz, Jim Clark, Milt Martin and Prior each picked up two hits.

Prior struck out six and walked five.

SERIES WINDUP

Tyees and Chiefs wind up their five-game series today which the Tyees lead three games to nothing with Leroy Han, 18-year-old righthander, scheduled to pitch the night game of the split twin bill.

Following the series the Tyees hit the road for 12 days meeting Vancouver, Yakima and Tri-City, returning home against the Capilanos on Aug. 22.

CAPS, INDIANS WIN

In other league action the Vancouver Caps spanked Yakima Bears, 7-1; Spokane Indians edged Tri-City, 3-2 and Lewiston nipped Salem, 5-3.

Eagles Default

Eagles of the Senior Amateur Baseball League were unable to field a team Friday and dropped their last game of the season to Oak Bay Oaks by default.

The full league schedule comes to an end Sunday.

DEMPSEY 'SORRY', BUT REX GETS NOD OVER EZ

OGDEN, Utah, Aug. 9 (AP)—Husky young Rex Layne bulled his way over former heavyweight champion Ezzard Charles Friday night in a 10-round decision which threw the Charles camp into an uproar.

Jack Dempsey, the former world heavyweight champ who was the referee and sole judge, held Layne's hand up in the victory sign as thunder showers deluged Ogden Stdaium.

Immediately afterward, Charles' co-manager, Jake Mintz, rushed into the ring, berated Dempsey with: "This is the lousiest decision I've ever seen."

Later, Dempsey told a reporter that "I called them just like I saw them. I'm sorry that Mintz or anyone else didn't like the decision. I'm sorry."

TWO POINTS BACK

Salmonacs Near Rocks

VANCOUVER, Aug. 9 (CP)—Along about the start of the fourth period Friday night you couldn't have gotten any money on New Westminster Salmonacs' chances of winning their Intercity Lacrosse League game with Indians.

Clary Jenion's tribe were boasting a 9-5 cushion entering the finale—and on the game's play to that period, Indians looked an easy shoo-in.

Everybody, in fact, was already picking the game's stars, it appeared that much in the bag for Indians.

Then suddenly, as if somebody had lit a fire under them—possibly coach Black Black did something of the sort between periods—Salmonacs erupted with a tremendous goal spree.

The net result was a 12-9 victory for Salmonacs and enabled them to take second place by themselves, one game behind Victoria and one game ahead of both Indians and Vancouver.

BYFORD OUTSTANDING

It ruined what could have been a perfect night for Indian's defensive ace, Jack Byford, making a determined bid for the league's Maitland Trophy, awarded to the most valuable player. Byford was just nosed out last year by Jackie Northrup for the honor.

Byford, nevertheless, emerged the game's outstanding individual star, potting three goals and tossing in an assist.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9 (AP)—Washington Friday put in a bid for the proposed heavyweight title fight between champion Jersey Joe Walcott and Rocky Marciano. The stadium seats 27,000.

COULD END SERIES TODAY

U.S. Takes Net Lead

MONTREAL, Aug. 9 (CP)—The United States Davis Cup tennis team today is shooting for its third straight victory over Canada in the final round of the North American zone tie.

If Vic Seixas and Herb Flam play as they did Friday in singles, the Americans can be expected to win the best-of-five series and possibly send second stringers Bob Perry and Jack Frost, new U.S. junior champ, into the final singles Sunday.

Flam and Seixas are scheduled to meet Brendan Macken and Lorne Main in the doubles. Macken and Main last week took the Mexican team in straight sets.

Friday, Flam defeated Henri Rochon, 6-2, 8-6, 6-2 and Seixas downed Main 6-2, 6-3, 6-4.

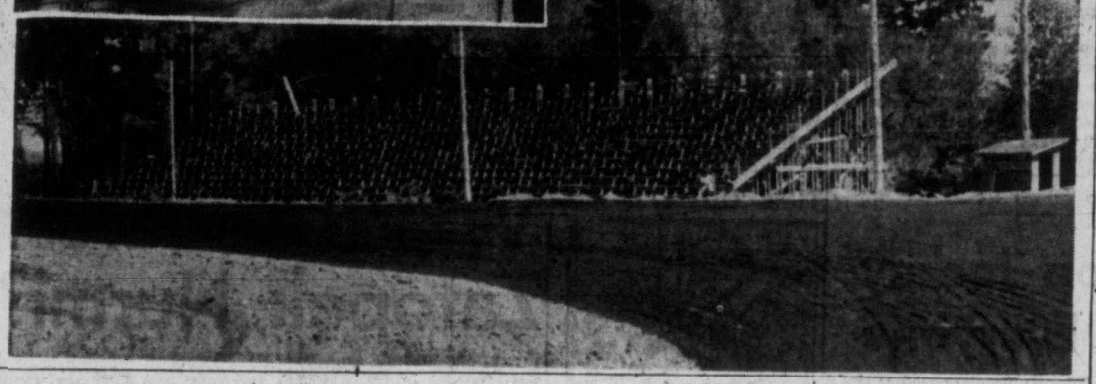
Canada defeated Mexico five straight last week and the United States downed Japan and Cuba.

Winner here takes on the winner of an Italy-India series for the right to challenge Australia, present holder of the coveted cup.

Canada has met the United States on eight occasions in the past but has never won. Last year, Canada downed Cuba and was in turn defeated by the Americans. The U.S. went on to take Sweden, only to be defeated 3-2 by the Australians.

United Throws a Wing-Ding

Champions of the Coast Soccer League, Victoria United completed its most successful season in history Friday night with a banquet at the Monterey Cafe. Here United manager George Eade gazes proudly at the championship bauble, flanked by two of the team's most avid fans. Harry Jones (left), 80, and A. G. Manzer, 78, are rated as two of the oldest and most loyal supporters of the championship club.



Hours of Hard Work

Auto racing is on its way back, thanks to the work of three Cobble Hill brothers, John, Bill and Ted Shearing, who are building this quarter-mile paved track on the old Cowichan Bay Road. Stands will hold 1,200 fans. First oil coat on the track was slated to be rolled today. First races are tentatively set for two weeks tonight.

Auto Racing Track Near Completion at Cowichan

By DENNY BOYD

Three sturdy young loggers who believe in working for themselves are currently in the middle of the biggest business venture of their active lives.

The Shearing brothers of Cobble Hill—John, Ted and Bill—whose ages are 23, 26 and 24, respectively, are making an attempt to revive the raging interest that died when Bruce Passmore's Langford auto racing track closed down two years ago.

The trio of brothers have formed a company, the Shearing Speedway Ltd., have a quarter-mile paved track almost complete with stands to sit 1,200, a parking lot to hold 1,000 cars, and they hope to hold their first auto races two weeks tonight.

TRACK SITE

Their track is on the old Cowichan Bay Road, about a quarter of a mile up from Dougan's Junction. From what was once 10 acres of trees, they have built a track that is their whole lives.

It was during last year's forest closure in July that the boys first got the idea of reviving racing in the lower Island area.

Ted, the oldest, claims: "I just got the crazy idea that if the three of us got together, we could build a track on Dad's property. Every spare minute we've had since then has been devoted to the track."

The boys put in endless hours clearing the land, levelling it, laying out the track, banking and rolling it, building stands and erecting light posts, and their current worry, paving the track.

MAY NEED HELP

The boys did all the work themselves except the paving, and right now they are anxiously waiting to see if the prime oil coat will take or whether a second coat will be required. With that exception the track is ready to go. If the coat does not set, the boys admit that they may be forced to seek outside financial help.

The stalwart brothers hope to present three types of racing to exhaust afficianados—big car, roadster and stock. They hope to present samples of all three in their first event which will be two weeks from tonight if all goes well.

CO-OPERATION ASSURED

Stocks are fairly easy to get, thanks to the large number of hot-rod fans around town. For roadster races, the boys are banking on the Vancouver Island Track Roadster Association, and have been assured of co-operation. The big cars will feature many of the drivers who supplied the thrills at the Langford track, including Seattle drivers, who have promised to come up for the first show to give it a rousing send-off.

TEN UNDER PAR

Ferrier Takes Lead At Tam O'Shanter

CHICAGO, Aug. 9 (AP)—Midway leader Jim Ferrier's gifted putter today was a magic wand that beckoned golf's richest prize, the $25,000 top money in the whirling "world championship" fairways carnival.

Ferrier, massive Australian who became a U.S. citizen in 1944, took a two-stroke lead over the 1947 National Open champion, Lew Worsham, into the third round of Tam o' Shanter's $90,000 four-ringed circus.

A former Canadian Open champion, Ferrier has added scorching rounds of 68-66 for a 36-hole total of 134, 10 under par. Big Jim's metronome putter tapped only 27 times in Friday's 31-35 effort.

This was discouraging news to most of the 80-player field, of which about 10 still remained within striking distance of the 37-year-old Ferrier, now 14th in the Professional Golfers' Association money-winning lists with nearly $7,000.

Worsham, who Friday wobbled to 71 from an opening 65, was a stroke ahead of Argentine star Robert De Vincenzo of Buenos Aires and Pete Cooper, White Plains, N.Y., knotted at 137. Cooper, co-leader with Worsham Thursday, needed a second-round 72.

Vancouver's Stan Leonard added a 76 to his 69 for 145. Pat Fletcher of Saskatoon was far back with 75-81—156.

Earl Stewart Jr. of Dallas, Tex., who spent three eagles for a 70, and slim Dave Douglas, Newark, Del., were notched at 138.

Five strokes behind Ferrier at 139 were the current United States Open champion, Julius Boros, Jimmy Clark and plump Ed. Oliver.

The lads back in the pack certainly won't quit trying in today's and Sunday's 18-hole rounds, not with $12,500 up for second prize, $5,000 for third, $3,000 for fourth and touches ranging from $2,500 to $1,000 from fifth through 16th places.

Youthful Ontario Girls Lead In Women's Close Golf Meet

Marlene Stewart Leads; Victorians Far in Rear

EDMONTON, Aug. 9 (CP)—The outcome of the Canadian Women's Close golf championship today rests with the performances of two young Ontario golfers in the final round of the 54-hole competition.

The diminutive, 18-year-old champion Marlene Stewart of Fonthill is favored to repeat after a two-round score of 150—eight under par. But Ontario champion Mary Gay, 20, of Kitchener, pulled up on the leader Friday for a 36-hole count of 153.

Miss Gay led the field in the second round when she blasted the Edmonton Mayfair's 6,655-yard layout with a three-under-par 76. Miss Stewart toured the second 18 in 78.

After the first round the champion was five strokes ahead when she burned up the course in a seven-under 72. Miss Gay had a 77 Thursday.

The two were alone in front. Rae Milligan, 18-year-old Alberta champion from Jasper, and Daintry Chisholm of Montreal tied for third with two round 168s.

Ontario, resting on the scores of Misses Stewart and Gay, was an easy winner in the inter-provincial team play with a four-player aggregate of 648. Alberta was second with 696.

The host province has not placed better in team competition since an Alberta squad won the crown in 1935. Miss Milligan's second-round 82 that put her in third place had much to do with Alberta's showing and its winning of the team low-net title with 633. Ontario had a low net of 635.

British Columbia was third in team play with a gross of 698, and defending champion Quebec had 702 for fourth. Miss Stewart's 150 won her the O'Keefe Trophy for individual low gross in the 36-hole team play.

Youth had a strangle-hold on top placings. Babs Davies of Vancouver, third after 18 holes, took an 87 for 169 and fifth place. Behind her was 17-year-old Saskatchewan champion Joanne Goulet of Regina with 88-82—170.

HERBERTSON HAS 174

Alone at 172 was Mrs. J. C. Whitelaw of Laval-Sur-Le-Lac, Que., and bracketed at 173 were Mrs. J. Dagenais of Laval and Mrs. Graeme Pyke of Montreal. Mrs. D. MacDougall of Saskatoon and junior Dorothy Herbertson of Esquimalt, B.C., had 174s.

Miss Stewart's early record-shattering performance slowed when her drives shortened and her second shots lost their accuracy. She had four birdies and three one-over pars.

Miss Gay seldom varied, firing three birdies and parring the rest.

Margaret Todd had an 85 for a 36-hole score of 175 and Shirley Fry 96-84—180.

MOORE CRACKS RECORD FOR 440-YARD HURDLES

LONDON, Aug. 9 (AP)—Charley Moore of the New York Athletic Club bettered the world record for the 440-yard hurdles today with 51.6 seconds in a driving rain at the British track and field games.

Moore clipped six-tenths of a second off the mark set by Roy Cochrane of the United States and tied by R. Ault, also of the U.S.

Jack Hutchins of Vancouver, member of Canada's Olympic track team, ran second in the 880-yard event. Reggie Pearman of the New York Pioneer Club won in 1.53.8 Hutchins' time was 1.54.1.

BROOKS ADD TO LEAD

Handy Andy Dodger Dandy

Handy Andy Pafko finally is paying Brooklyn some juicy dividends on the big deal of last season.

Hitting an even .300 with 15 home runs and 55 runs batted in, the 31-year-old outfielder is refuting those who said he was "all washed up" when Chicago put him on the block.

Pafko seems to be overcoming a habit that disturbed manager Chuck Dressen. His first 10 homers came with nobody on base. Then came Friday's three-run blast off Curt Simmons in the 10th inning for a 6-3 victory over Phillies.

It was an important blow for Dodgers, enabling them to stretch their lead to six and one-half games. New York was shut out by Boston's Max Surkont, 2-0, and St. Louis lost to Cincinnati, 8-5.

Pafko drove home five runs with his homer, double and a long fly ball. Preacher Roe, who took over in the eighth after Ray Moore turned in six and one-third innings of brilliant relief work for Chris Van Cuyk was the winner.

Surkont, veteran righthander, held second-place Giants to four hits, stopping Al Dark's 22-game hitting streak.

Murry Dickson took matters into his own hands for downtrodden Pittsburgh Pirates. He shut out the Chicago Cubs for 10 innings with six hits and then broke up the game with a 10th inning single for a 1-0 verdict.

Rookie Bill Glynn's homer in the 12th enabled Cleveland to tighten up the American League race with a 10-9 win over St. Louis Browns.

Chicago came from behind twice to sweep a double-header from Detroit, 4-3 and 2-1, behind Billy Pierce and Joe Dobson.

Tillicums Advance In Island Softball Round

Lou McCorkall's youthful Tillicums hustled their way into the Vancouver Island Senior B softball playoffs Friday night when they nipped TimKeneers 8-7 in 12 innings at Heywood Avenue.

The game was a replay of the sudden-death match that ended in a 7-7 tie earlier in the week.

Today Tillicums were scheduled to meet Mesatchie Lake in Duncan in the first game of the lower Island series. Remainder of the series will be at Central Park Sunday.

Timkeneers at one time held a 7-3 lead but Tillicums fought back with three runs in the sixth and tied it with a single run in the seventh.

Alf Aspinall went the full 12 innings for the winners, while Ray Crabbe, who relieved Dennis Mann in the third, was the loser.

At Macdonald Park, Esquimalt A.A. won their fifth straight game by dumping Joe Fosters 9-2 in the first of a three-game series for the right to enter the Colonist Cup finals against Tillicums.

Second game of the series is slated for Tuesday night at Heywood Avenue.

Ted Minnis, who has won all five games for Esquimalt in their streak, gave up three hits in the victory. Hughie MacDonald bashed a three-run homer in the seventh inning for the winners.

Sportsmen Favored By Game Code Revisions

Duck and deer hunters will be pleased with changes made in the 1952-53 British Columbia game regulations as released this week.

Duck hunters in the province will be allowed a daily bag limit of eight ducks during the season with a possession limit of 16 and a season bag-limit of 100 in the aggregate. This does not apply to wood and eider ducks.

The duck season has been advanced three weeks. In the territory north of the 51st parallel and including the Queen Charlotte Islands the duck season extends from November 8 to January 12. In the remainder of the Western District, which covers Vancouver Island, the season will open October 18 and close December 22.

Barring a forest closure at the time, the deer season will be two weeks longer, opening September 20 and closing November 9.

The 1951-52 season extended from September 22 through to October 31, but a forest closure forced a revised season.

Licenses will cost an extra dollar this year, the price jumping to $4 for ordinary hunting, and $7 for big game hunting of moose, elk and grizzly bear.

Tags have seen a similar increase, deer tags rising from 25 cents to 50 cents, and moose, elk and mountain goat tags costing $2 instead of $1.

Following are summaries on regulations covering game in British Columbia.

HAZLETT IN CLOSE SINGLES VICTORY

White Rock Veteran Scores

Jim Hazlett of White Rock has been lawn bowling for a total of 35 years and the battle he waged for the singles championship of the Silver Jubilee lawn bowling tournament Friday night was probably the toughest match he has had in those years.

Hazlett became the men's singles champion when he scored a tight 15-14 victory over Victoria West's Bill Davidson, a veteran of local competitions, in 16 exciting ends.

For the seventh year in a row the J. F. Cullin trophy, emblematic of men's singles honors, leaves Victoria. The last local winner was W. Peden who captured the trophy in 1946.

Davidson was the aggressor in the match Friday, building up a lead that seemed to indicate an easy victory.

At the completion of six ends Davidson led 6-3 and Hazlett finally tied the score at the 10th end after taking four points on the eighth end to slice the deficit.

Again Davidson went ahead but Hazlett doggedly stayed in contention. He outscored Davidson 4-2 over the last four ends for the margin of victory, his single point on the 16th end being the point that gave him the trophy and championship.

In men's doubles, E. Rae and G. Murray of Grandview moved into the finals by defeating Ernie Myers and J. Thomas of Tacoma in the semifinal.

The huge field of mixed rinks was cut to four semi-finalists Friday. H. Philbrook's Victoria West rink was the only local team to survive and entered the semi-finals together with H. C. Woodcock of West Point Grey, T. Lord of New Westminster and B. J. Pinks of New Westminster.

The tournament was scheduled to end today with finals in all other events being played this morning. Men's finals are at Beacon Hill greens and women's finals at Canadian Pacific.

Grand consolations, open to any bowlers in the tournament, ended this afternoon and prize presentations will be made tonight at a dance and social at Canadian Legion Britannia Branch.

LET'S LOOK BACK OVER GROVE'S RECORD

Bobby Can't Match 'Old Mose'—Yet

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK, Aug. 9 (AP)—Now look, let us not be hasty about comparing this nice young fellow, Bobby Shantz, with another lefthander who used to pitch for the Athletics, name of Robert Moses Grove. Let us leave young Bobby to develop for a time, say 10 or 15 years, before we take him beyond his depth.

It would be a great favor to Jimmy Dykes, who manages the present Athletics and who played infield alongside Grove—what little infield was necessary. Every time Shantz racks up another one, some enthusiast pins Dykes against a wall and demands to know if the devious little cuss isn't a better pitcher than old Mose was.

Well, it puts Dykes in an awkward spot. About all he can do under the circumstances is take a reflective puff on his cigar and say that it is difficult to compare 'em, Shantz being the cutie type with five or six different pitches whereas Grove, in his greatest days with the Athletics, depended upon a fast ball, a faster ball and a bullet, holding the latter back for emergencies.

The danger is that if it keeps up Dykes is going to forget himself and forget that Grove was a sullen, unsociable bloke in his playing days and tell somebody off. Much as he must love the little tyke and much as he would love to see him notch those 30 victories, he knows that Shantz faces an almost super-human task in trying to match any phase of Grove's record.

Sure, old Mose was the last American Leaguer to win 30 or more and the only southpaw ever to attain that mark. That was in 1931, when he closed with a 31-4 record—against the modern rabbit ball, incidentally. But that just happened to represent the peak of his great career. Let us look at what they are asking Shantz to shoot at.

Grove pitched 17 years in the big show, the first nine with the Athletics and the final eight with the Boston Red Sox. In his last year when he was a graying 41 and his fast ball just a memory, he still was able to break even at 7-7 with a sore-arm curve. They never again got Mose under that .500 mark after he broke in in 1925 with a 10-12 reading.

Those seven he won in his valedictory were just sufficient to give the big fireballer a round total of 300 victories for the long route against 141 defeats. Again these figures scarcely indicate how magnificent the Hall of Famer was, how virtually unbeatable, during the period when he was really blowing them down.

In the nine-year strech from 1927 through 1935 Grove only once won fewer than 20 games. His victories read, in order, 20, 24, 24, 28, 31, 25, 24, 8, 20. That lonesome eight came in 1934, his first after he had been traded to the "Gold Sox" in a spectacular deal. He had a sore arm that year, but he came back with a curve the next that was good for 20 wins, and as late as 1938 he still was cagey enough to lead the American League in winning percentage with 14-4.

In his four greatest years, 1928-31, Grove blazed a won-lost record of 102-23, which possibly is without parallel. He led the American League in earned-run average nine times, his prize being 2.05 in 1931. He led in strikeouts seven straight years, starting with his first season in the big show.

None of this is meant to discourage Shantz or to suggest that Philadelphia's fans haven't something to get excited about. They have. One who saw Grove at his peak merely wishes to recommend moderation.

Marciano No Dempsey But He Can Hurt You

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK (NEA)—Rocky Marciano now has had 42 professional matches, and still no one knows for sure whether he can fight.

Harry Matthews turned out to be little more than the myth so many suspected he might be.

Before the roof caved in at Yankee Stadium, the totally unmarked Matthews said he had never been hit save for the time he suffered a broken nose in 1943.

Rocky Marciano

Joe Walcott

And when Marciano landed the second left hook in the second round, The Athlete acted just like a bloke who had never been hit.

It made you wonder who he fought in 105 jousts.

The answer comes pretty close to being "no one of consequence."

Marciano remains pretty crude, but as Jack Kearns best describes The Rock, he is a hurting fighter.

"He rates with Jack Dempsey as a hitter," says Doc Kearns, "may hit even a little harder and, again like Dempsey, he hurts the other guy with every punch."

Marciano also has demonstrated that he can take it more than somewhat. He did this against Roland LaStarza. Joe Louis shook him up with a couple of punches. Matthews, who knocked out 62 opponents, twice belted him solidly in the first heat.

When a heavyweight with the sock of Marciano absorbs punishment and crowds the other fellow, he is on the move, and the Brockton Block Buster most certainly is—right in the direction of Jersey Joe Walcott.

Louis Caught Walcott, Why Not Marciano?

How Marciano will fare against the moving target that is the amazing Walcott is now the question. Marciano no doubt also will have to shake off the most devastating blow that has ever been parked on his chin, for the Great Father of Camden has clearly demonstrated that he packs a pistol in both fists.

But a plodding Louis finally caught Walcott, and there is little reason to doubt that the much younger and thoroughly aggressive Marciano won't do the same.

There is a tendency now to compare Marciano with Dempsey. They must mean the 21-year-old Dempsey, who first came to New York to box Wild Bert Kenney and John Lester Johnson 10 rounds each at the old Commonwealth Club in Harlem in the summer of 1916. No one but John the Barber Reisler, who had him at the moment, paid any attention to the young man from the far west who always looked like he needed a shave. He got little or no more money and disappeared.

Dempsey did not bump into Kearns until February of 1917, and there was a vast difference in him by late September of that year, when he decisively outboxed the highly skillful Bob McAllister in four rounds in Oakland.

If He Becomes a Depmsey, it Won't Be Close

Kearns was working on the big build-up now and knockouts, but young Dempsey made a grand impression going 10 rounds with clever Billy Miske in St. Paul in May of 1918. He was hardly sharp when he required 12 rounds to flatten Bill Brennan in New York in December of 1920, although the Irishman was considerably more formidable than a lot of people believe.

If there was any question about Dempsey's boxing ability, it was dissipated when he and Tommy Gibbons stepped 15 rounds like featherweights in Shelby in 1923. Dempsey was 31 when he boxed Gene Tunney the first time, and his legs were beginning to go, yet the Manly Marine will tell you he did not once hit him squarely in 20 stanzas.

If Rocky Marciano, who has come a long way in four years, acquires Jack Dempsey's poise and polish, it won't even be close with anybody around today.

MILLIGAN NETS GOAL FOR SCOTS

VANCOUVER, Aug. 9 (CP)—Despite a great second-half comeback by B Division South Hill, St. Andrews Friday took a 3-2 win in their Dominion trophy soccer semi-final at Callister Park.

Victoria's Wally Milligan scored one goal for the Scots.

Moniz Still Leads Tyees

Dependable Bob Moniz, the hit-and-run wizard of Victoria Tyees, continues to lead his club with a steady .333 average and is producing runs at a prolific rate.

Moniz leads the club in base hits with 135 and is tied with Cec Garriott in runs with 91.

Other members of the club have been bolstering their averages in recent games. Don Pries and Garriott are the other .300 hitters at .309 and .305 respectively.

Jim Clark is on another hitting streak and has boosted his mark to .298. Lu Branham has shot up to .294 and Granny Gladstone has climbed to .291. Gladstone is leading the team and the league in runs batted in with 92.

Vancouver Capilano catcher John Ritchey still leads the league in hitting with a .345 mark in games to Thursday. Close behind Ritchey are Mel Wasley of Spokane at .342 and Wenatchee's Walt Pocekay with a .335 average.

Tyee averages, including Friday's game, and league averages to Monday follow:

ALL BUT TEACHER

World's Top Jockey Known to Everyone

LONDON, Aug. 9 (CP)—"Fancy Teacher saying she'd never heard of Gordon Richards."

That was the bemused reaction of an 11-year-old British schoolgirl caught cutting out pictures of the world's winningest jockey, and it neatly illustrates the national mood Everybody in these islands—except the benighted school teacher—has heard of hustling horseman Gordon Richards the mechanical man.

Wherever the champion rides, cries of "Gordon" transcend all others as the field races for the finishing post. There is no running commentary, so unofficial race callers make it a habit to announce " Gordon's going to do it" or "Gordon can't make it" when the horses are a furlong or so from home.

Richards dominates English racing without effort or showmanship, being one of the most modest men in the game. His record speaks for itself—champion jockey 24 times since 1925, winner of at least 100 races a season for 22 years.

He rode his 100th winner this season at Salisbury July 10, bringing his lifetime total to 4,494—more than any other rider in the world. His closest rival is Alberta-raised Johnny Longden, who passed the 4,000 mark this year while riding in the United States.

Racing writers used to accept old-time greats like Steve Donoghue and Alex Archer as tops in their profession, but the chances are most of them now would vote for Richards as the greatest of all time.

Many articles have been written analyzing how Richards, at 48, is able to keep on riding winners with such consistency. The most common explanation is that this swarthy, steel-wristed little man, who rides to the track in a high-powered automobile, has an uncanny sense of balance.

Races in Britain are run over many different types of course, some uphill in parts, some downhill, some with quger, frying-pan twists. Keeping a horse balanced and in stride is one of the jockey's toughest jobs, and Richards seems to have the knack. Although he uses his whip only sparingly, if at all, he also is renowned for his ability to coax an extra effort out of a horse that seems to be beaten.

Oddly, he's never been able to win an Epsom Derby. British fans hope he may do so next year aboard the Queen's Aureole, a promising but unraced two-year-old by Hyperion out of Angelola.

One shrewd character managed to get a long price against Aureole. He wrote his bookmaker that he had a dream in which he saw No. 1 win the Derby. The bookie promptly offered really long odds, not realizing that if Aureole runs in the Derby he'll automatically be No. 1 on the racing card as Her Majesty's representative—owner's precedence, they call it.

Canadians to Compete in U.S. Amateur

NEW YORK, Aug. 9 (AP)—More than 1,000 were called but just 175 lucky ones were chosen to make the trek to Seattle for the National Amateur Golf Championship Aug. 18-23.

And if there is going to be a dark horse in the field of 200 at tee-off time—there were 25 exemptions—he will be 35-year-old Charles Makaiwa, the champion of Hawaii, who showed them all how it was done by firing an eight-under-par 68-66—134 in Honolulu.

So the members of the America's cup teams of the United States, Canada and Mexico, all of whom were exempt from qualifying, will have something to look forward to when they meet Makaiwa.

The U.S. team includes defending champion Billy Maxwell, British Amateur champion Harvie Ward, and the former British titleholder, Frank Stranahan.

Canada's team includes Walter McElroy, Vancouver, 1951 Canadian Amateur champion; Bill Mawhinney, Vancouver, former amateur titlist, and Gerry Kesselring, Kitchener, Ontario Amateur and Open champion. Other members are Phil Farley, Toronto, captain; Nick Weslock, Windsor, Ont., Pete Kelly, Fredericton, and Percy Clogg of Vancouver.

Besides the cup team, Canada has another entrant in Doug Bajus of Vancouver, who qualified with a 76-76—152 for 10th spot in the Seattle area qualifying lists.

Which Greatest Zatopek, Nurmi?

NEW YORK, Aug. 9 (AP)—Somehow we had gained the innocent impression that everyone now conceded Emil Zatopek, the sizzling Czech, to be the greatest foot runner of all time, an even more magnificent athlete than fabulous Paavo Nurmi. We have just had our throat jumped down.

"All this talk about Zatopek makes me very tired," the man said with iron in his voice. "Nurmi would have run right up his back. If I hadn't been too busy I would have written something about it."

We suggested, mildly, that he meant he would have backed Nurmi to lick the Olympic sensation at 5,000 and 10,000 metres. After all, we pointed out, Zatopek won the marathon, too, a distance of ground the Finnish hero never tackled.

"Oh, didn't he?" came the retort. "Paavo only ran the marathon distance a lot faster than it had ever been run before when he was training for the 1932 Olympics at Los Angeles. Of course, it wasn't in official competition, but the times he set left no question that he would have won it as he pleased if they hadn't kicked him out. He was nearly 35 then, and he intended to run only in the marathon and win it as his farewell."

DECLARED INELIGIBLE

We recalled vaguely that there was a great hullabaloo when Nurmi was declared ineligible on the eve of the '32 games, having been charged with taking large hunks of "appearance" money, but the business about the marathon had slipped our memory. We since have dug into the files and find this excerpt from an interview given by Paavo in 1946.

"Only once did I train for a special distance," he said: "That was for the marathon run at Los Angeles. And even today I am annoyed that I didn't get to run in that race and achieve a result which certainly wouldn't be approached even today."

That would seem to leave little doubt of what Paavo had intended to do. In the same interview the flying Finn said of the 1924 Paris games, in which he won the 10,000-metre cross country, the 5,000-metre and the 1,500-metre, a feat of versatility which bears comparison with Zatopek's.

NEVER PRESSED

"During the Paris Olympics I felt myself so superior to the world's other runners that a counterpart of this situation will hardly occur again. I think it unique that in winning the 1,500 metres race I slowed down by a third in the closing stretch in order to conserve strength.

"I never concentrated on any special distance, but ran anything from 800 metres to 10,000 metres. Because the world's records for these distances were almost entirely in my name, I could not be spurred to beat them, which I most certainly could have done without any trouble. If I were 30 years younger, I certainly would be in position to better all present middle distance records."

SWIM PROGRAM PAYS OFF

Ocean Falls Claims Own Olympic Record

One Olympic record that did not figure in the prize lists at Helsinki is held by the small papermaking community of Ocean Falls, British Columbia.

Three of their young swimmers were included in the Canadian swim team total of nine members. This repeats the town's record of 1950, when it provided a similar proportion of the Canadian team entered for the British Empire Games in New Zealand.

All three members — Lenora Fisher, Canada's finest backstroke star who is only 15; Allan Gilchrist and Leo Portelance, who were both in the Empire Games team — learned to swim at the pool owned by Pacific Mills Limited at their Ocean Falls plant. An instructor is provided by the company.

Ocean Falls swimmers already hold 29 Dominion records, made up of seven senior men's records, six senior ladies, seven junior ladies, six junior men and three junior relays.

Pride of the town's team of 14 swimmers is Miss Fisher. She holds 13 Dominion senior and junior backstroke records and broke three records at the Olympic trials held in Toronto in June. Lenora started swimming when she was 13 and entered the competition field last year for the first time.

Allan Gilchrist and Leo Portelance were placed in the first six of the American National Swim Meet held in the U.S.A. this year. Allan swims for U.C.L.A. and Leo for Ohio State.

Chosen as one of two swimmers to attend the invitational meet at Christchurch, New Zealand, last year, Allan was also holder of the Beattie Trophy in 1950 as the outstanding swimmer of Canada.

He took part in the 1948 Olympics and was accompanied by Leo Portelance's brother, Jim, who was an alternate swimmer in the Canadian team.

Youngest swimmer at Ocean Falls is five-year-old Kathie Adams, who swims 20 yards at every gala and beats the seven and eight-year-olds.

The Ocean Falls pool is fresh water, indoors, 20 yards long and all tiled. It is open all year round with an average attendance of 2,000 per month.

Someone Doesn't Choose to Run

Sue's on her way to tell her mother about a stranger who's ambling along the beach. She really doesn't have to hurry, because he's a slow, plodding fellow, who'll not move far before she returns. To determine his identity draw a line from dot 1 to dot 31. Afterwards, you may wish to color the drawing.

TRICKS AND RIDDLES

Try this at your next party. Place a small cork in the neck of a bottle as shown below. Ask someone to blow it the remainder of the way in. Seems easy, but of course there's a trick to it.

First of all, the bottle must be held horizontally if the force of the blow is to push the cork in. Secondly, the person who gives a big puff is in for a surprise. Instead of sliding forward, the cork actually backs out due to the air already inside.

Blow gently and the cork slides in easily.

NAIL THIS DOWN

A carpenter bought a quantity of nails for a job. There were three kinds, together weighing 24 pounds. The tenpenny and sixpenny weighed just double the twopenny, while the sixpenny and twopenny weighed as much as the tenpenny. What was the quantity, by weight, of each?

Answer: Tenpenny—12 lbs; sixpenny—6 lbs; twopenny—6 lbs.

DIZZY DOINGS

Guests at your next party are in for a merry whirl if you have them play this game:

Bring out an umbrella or cane. In turn, each player is asked to lean over until his forehead rests on the umbrella or cane handle. In this position, and while holding the object firmly on the floor, he must walk quickly around it four or five times.

Immediately after the fourth or fifth round, the game director tells the player to walk straight to a chair, table, door or some other object in the room. The rest of the players get their fun watching these dizzy walks.

Uncle Bob Times Club

There was wide variety again in the entries this week. We even have a dress designer in the club. Here are the winners and I will tell you about their entries later.

Marian MacLoud, 1450 Harrop Road.
Virginia Leeming, Box 3,421, R.R. 1, Victoria.
Darlaise Cutt, Cordova Bay, R.R. 4.
Edith M. Hayton, 637 Niagara Street.
Florence Kelly, R.R. 1, Cobble Hill.

There's not much space this week so we will have to make it short.

Florence, who is 11 years old and goes to Sylvania School did a whole book. It had riddles, colored drawings and jokes. There was a story and farm scenes and pictures to color. It was among the best entries we have had for weeks.

Margaret, who is 10, also worked hard. She did a farm scene, some dotographs and what looked particularly striking, a number of gayly colored pictures mounted on black paper.

Darlaise Cutt, another 11-year-old of Cordova Bay did a very well-colored drawing of a sweet pea.

Edith Hayton, 12-years-old, whose hobby is dress designing, sent in patterns for a beach outfit which she designed herself.

Virginia Leeming did a clever picture of a galloping horse.

Next week I hope some essays will be coming in about learning to swim and how you are spending your holidays. However, they don't have to be on those subjects. We will leave the contest wide open to do anything you wish.

We have a lot more new members this week, but as you can see there is no space to put their names down. We will do that another time.

Dear Uncle Bob:

I would like to join the Uncle Bob Times Club.

I would like to try for some of the prizes you offer.

221-B Baker St. Is on 59th St. Now

By GAILE DUGAS

Sherlock Holmes, the famed detective in the deerstalker hat, arrived in Manhattan recently from London.

With his friend and companion, Dr. John Watson, he went straight to his lodgings at 221-B Baker Street, and wouldn't say whether he was here on a case. He just said his Baker Street rooms looked exactly as he had left them.

This, of course, is a bit of fiction, just as Holmes himself is fictional—and probably the most famous character of all time in the world of detective stories.

On closer inspection, 221-B Baker Street turned out to be the Plaza Galleries on 59th Street, but that, as Holmes would say, is elemental, my dear Watson. Baker Street is inside, and it's a completely faithful and authentic reproduction of the room where it is always 1897.

* * *

The room has been brought to the United States by Adrian Conan Doyle, son of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the writer who created Holmes and finally had to kill him off so he could return to his other pursuits.

To a great many people all over the world, Sherlock Holmes is an actual person, not just a character in fiction. Each year, Adrian Conan Doyle gets frantic and pathetic pleas for help, all of them addressed to Holmes.

When the exhibit in Manhattan opened, an elderly lady stopped in and asked for the great detective. Conan Doyle explained that Holmes just wasn't around, whereupon the lady grew indignant and red-faced. She knew quite well he was there, she said; she'd seen his picture somewhere recently.

As you stand at the railing, look into Baker Street study, you can't help feeling that Holmes and Watson have just quit the room—bound, perhaps, for Paddington Station in a hansom cab.

* * *

It's a room of Victorian charm and clutter, with Holmes' armchair on one side of the fireplace and Watson's on the other.

On a long deal table stands a tray with half-empty teacups, half-eaten crumpets and napkins just tossed down. In the silver butter dish are the bullets Holmes has carelessly flung there (they were taken from the body of a man murdered in 1895), and on the back of the door, hangs Holmes' deerstalker and Inverness, together with Dr. Watson's tall silk hat and respectable black coat.

Baker Street lodgings of Sherlock Holmes, a piece of fiction which has become very real to countless Holmes fans, faithfully reproduced in this exhibit in New York. Here Adrian Conan Doyle, son of creator of Holmes, leans against fireplace. In background is wax bust of Sherlock.

Beside the fireplace is the coal scuttle where Holmes kept his cigars; in one corner the acid-stained table at which he worked out his experiments in chemistry and next to it, the wax bust of Holmes, draped about with his mouse-colored dressing-gown. (The latter items figured heavily in "The Empty House").

There is also the big desk at which Sir Arthur Conan Doyle wrote the Holmes stories. On it is Holmes' famous magnifying glass.

* * *

There are various and sundry other wonderful things in this cosy room; the Persian slipper holding Holmes' shag tobacco; a harpoon like the one that killed Black Peter; cigarettes from the year 1897; the "agony columns" of the London newspapers ready and waiting for Holmes' perusal.

The red velvet curtains are drawn against the raw and inclement weather of Baker Street; off-stage, there are sound effects of horses' hooves clip-clopping across the cobbles.

The game is afoot.

As you leave the lodgings and find yourself back on 59th Street again, you'll see a red car at the curb, its sides lettered "Holmes Electric Protection. Burglary Service."

A little modern for Sherlock, perhaps, but you know all goes well in Baker treet.

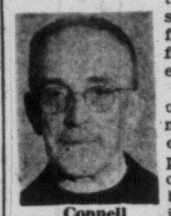
NATURE TALKS

By ROBERT CONNELL

Little Wild Gardens on Outskirts of City

The occasional vacant lots that still linger about the outskirts of the city are little wild gardens these days where some of our native flowers are to be found by the traveler on foot.



Connell

I saw an axample of this along Richmond Avenue the other day where a patch of our earlier camass was in full bloom. I had seen it a few days before making sheets of blue in the Uplands but this little cluster of blue seemed especially precious by the side of a city street.

* * *

The camass, or quamash as the Indian name is best represented, is a near cousin of the bluebell or wild hyacinth whose blue flowers are so common about gardens these days and it may be said to play the same place in our flora as the wild hyacinth does in the British Isles.

We have two species of Camass, one coming into flower just as the other is going out. The earlier is distinguished by the isolation of one of the six petals, so that the flower shows five above and one below in its flower pattern. This is a smaller plant than the later one and not so conspicuously flowered. Botanists call it Camassia quamash. The other and later species is taller, and one of its distinguishing features is only apparent when the flowers are going over—then the petals twist themselves about the seed-pod.

* * *

It may be one's good fortune occasionally to come on a white specimen of this species, well worth transference to the garden and multiplication.

But leaving the camass behind I went on to the Pemberton Woods. There, as wild conditions still prevail beyond the new roads, I found an abundance of our common western buttercup, some with six or more petals. An abundance of the little purple and mauve vetch with its double rows of leaflets. The common rib-grass or ribwort plantain was displaying its creamy white stamens ringing its dark heads. I don't know whether or not children have a name for it here, but in England the plant has long been known to them as "soldiers" or "cocks-and-hens" because mimic battles were fought with them, the object being to knock off the opponent's "head." The greater plantain with its long head used to be sought for canary food and was much appreciated by the little cage birds.

* * *

At the north end of the woods the flowering shrubs are conspicuous. The flowering currant is of course over, but the snow-white blossom of the service-berry or saskatoon as Prairie people know it best was very conspicuous. The petals are long and so the snow-white flowers as they cluster at the ends of their little branches present a very pretty soft and almost fluffy appearance. It is unfortunate that the fruit on the coast is dry, very unlike the juicy product of the prairie saskatoon berry. It is sometimes known as Juneberry or service-berry. The species here is not that of the prairies or eastern Canada but the general characteristic is similar.

* * *

The wild cherry is also found in full flower near by the saskatoon bushes. The white blossoms are small replicas of those of the cultivated trees; but the fruit, I am sorry to say, is a bitter disappointment to the experimenter.

GRUBER ON CARS

'Small' U.S. Car Large By Canadian Standard

Over-All Length Increasing And Width Rapidly Getting Completely Out of Hand

Second of series on cars by Gruber.

Continuing the evaluation of automobiles of current production, I think we have shown in our dissertation of last week that the so-called "light" or "low-priced" American cars offer a means of transportation that is more than adequate for the vast majority of people.

We must remember that what we over here call a "small" car is by standards of any other country looked upon as a heavy and powerful and large vehicle, which, in fact, it is.

Just yesterday I was perusing an English motoring periodical, which showed a picture of an American Plymouth, and the caption read ". . . . this large transatlantic machine . . ." etc.

Skipping for a moment all the cars of varying sizes and weights that come between the relatively light cars discussed last week and the heaviest type of passenger cars made on this continent, we will go directly to the consideration of the latter sort. Our largest and most powerful cars are the Cadillac, Lincoln, the 400 series Packard "Patrician," the Chrysler "New Yorker," and the Buick "Road Master." A word will also be said about the Studebaker "Landcruiser," though though this car weighs at least 1,000 pounds less than the others, and is also priced at least $1,000 lower.

ROAD LOCOMOTIVES

In comparison with the smaller cars, these veritable road locomotives are heavier to handle, and their absurd and useless exterior bulk makes them a punishment to drive in the city.

Over-all length, though not the wheel-base, has steadily increased, and width-wise the situation is getging completely out of hand.

The Buick and Cadillac, for instance, are fully six feet ten inches wide! Yet interior seating dimensions, seat height, leg room and general seating comfort are often no better than in the smaller cars, and sometimes worse.

Their suspension is so soft as to make them dangerous at the extremely high speeds they are capable of, and it does not take much to make the springs "bottom" against the chassis.

The exterior chrome decorations have increased in direct proportion to the constantly deteriorating quality of the chrome plating, though in justice to the manufacturers it must be stated that there exist government restrictions that call for conservation of certain strategically important materials necessary for durable plating.

IMPROVED MECHANICALLY

Notwithstanding some of these harsh criticisms, there can be no doubt that year by year these cars are improved mechanically, and the large and expensive American car today offers the ultimate in mechanical dependability, smoothness and efficiency. Let us look at them individually.

Perhaps the most famous and coveted make on the road is the Cadillac. (The 1931 Cadillac may have some purely local notoriety, and nobody that I know of covets it; I speak now of the 1952 model).

The name "Cadillac" has stood in the eyes of the motoring public for the ultimate in luxury, and there is some justification in its being called the finest mass-produced car in the world.

Its mechanical supremacy, always claimed by the manufacturer, became close to a fact with the 1937 side-valve V/8 engine, which was built for the next eleven years without basic alteration, but with constant refinements; it would still be the most silent and smooth passenger-car engine ever built, were it not for the new overhead valve V/8 motor used in Cadillacs since 1949. This engine is of smaller displacement than the famous powerplant it superceded, but vastly more powerful and efficient.

DURABILITY, SLOW WEAR

It was one of the first engines produced of "over-square" design, meaning that its bore is larger than the stroke. That makes for very slow piston-travel per mile, indicating very good durability and slow wear. The absence of any mechanical sound whatever throughout the whole car is almost uncanny, under all conceivably driving conditions, and that actually brought with it interesting problem of silencing the movement of the electric clock; as it was by far the loudest mechanism in the whole car!

This engine, of nearly 5¼ litre displacement, coupled with the new double-ratio hydra-matic transmission, also delivers a fuel-economy unapproached by most smaller cars. I have myself tested a 1951 Cadillac at better than 24 miles per gallon, at constant speed of 55 miles per hour and at sustained speeds of 95 m.p.h., which, incidentally, can be maintained, road conditions permitting and if your life insurance is paid up, indefinitely without any strain or ill-effect on the engine, the fuel consumption never dropped below 20 m.p.g. Oil consumption is nil between 2,000-mile changes. The true top speed of the Cadillac is around 104 m.p.h.

EFFICIENT COMBUSTION

The Chrysler New Yorker has an engine which is identical in dimensions of the Cadillac; in fact, Cadillac pistons can be used to excellent advantage in the Chrysler engine; they are lighter and have a slightly higher thrust than the Chrysler pistons, thus automatically raising the compression still further. But there are other important differences between the two engines. Chryslers use a combustion chamber of hemispherical shape, and have larger valves that are also set at an incline. The former gives more efficient combustion, the latter better "breathing."

If used in conjunction with the torque-converter semi-automatic transmission, very powerful performance is available. Owing probably to the lower rear-axle ratio used in the Chrysler compared with the Cadillac, the engine turns over faster an any given speed, and does not give particularly good gasoline mileage, and is generally more noticeable.

It is a newer design, and not as well "seasoned" as the Cadillac engine.

However, the Chrysler has a clear edge in seating accommodation, being considerably more comfortable; its outside dimensions are also more reasonable; it is several important inches narrower from outside, and while the wheelbase is nearly eight inches longer, the total car length is no greater than that of the Cadillac.

We are even of the opinion that the Chrysler bodies are of a higher quality; but it is a well-known fact that a body is only as good as the chassis it sits on, and the Cadillac chassis is considered to be one of the finest in the world.

EASY ENTRANCE AND EXIT

The Chryslers are also built higher, giving a very fine upright seating position, and very easy entry and exit through doors that open what appears to be a full right angle. It is also thought that the Chrysler rides better at most average speeds; the Cadillac does hug the road more firmly at the extreme upper speed range, due to its lower centre of gravity, and also appears to travel more levelly at extremely slow speeds, due to its softer springing. Like in all Chrysler products, beginning with the Plymouth, the highest standards of workmanship, quality, and engineering are evident throughout.

The Lincoln came up with a brand new car in 1952.

It joined the general trend toward high-compression, valve-in-head, and relatively compact V-8 engines; the whole car has been completely redesigned mechanically and appearance-wise from the enormous and overweighted Lincoln "Cosmopolitan" of 1949 to 1951. A much neater and apparently more efficient car results. The engine, also of over-square design, but of smaller displacement by some 14 cubic inches than the Chrysler and the Cadillac, still has more adequate power, being only slightly less spectacular in performance than the other two cars we spoke of above.

BRAND-NEW DESIGN

It should have very good durability, but being a brand new and completely unseasoned design, actual experience in the hands of owners is still very limited. There seems to be some difficulty with the hydraulic valve-silencers, as the tappets were noisy in every one of the three new Lincolns I drove. But that does not affect in the slightest the running of the engine, and these inconsequential "bugs" found in practically all new designs will be eliminated as production increases.

But there are already several ways in which the Lincoln leads all its competitors.

It rides beautifully, steers with surprising lightness and precision even without the aid of hydraulic steering assist-mechanism, which is sorely needed on both the Chrysler and the Cadillac, and has, for my contours, at least, the most comfortable seating, front and back, with a particularly fine driving position. Its fine steering is due largely to a front suspension different from the other cars, and also brand new, but already most successful, in design. There are ball-joints, around which the front wheels directly pivot when steered, eliminating the king pins and much extra linkage, as well as many points that otherwise must be greased. The brake pedal (there is no clutch) is hung from the fire wall, like in all current Ford cars and is thus directly linked to the master-cylinder, which is mounted most conveniently for servicing on the engine side of the fire wall.

Now I am running out of space. The Buick, Packard and Studebaker will have to wait for next week, along with a brief discussion on the various automatic transmissions now available, and a quick survey of the larger and very expensive English and other foreign cars, and wherein they compare favorably or otherwise with the American cars of similar price range.

Weird and Wonderful Amateur Baseball Game

Whole City Tense When Sons of Canada and Travelers Clash For Championship

Twenty-five years ago this week there occurred in Victoria one of the most weird and wonderful amateur baseball games that local fandom was ever treated—or should we say subjected, to.

Boyd

At that time, the Victoria Amateur Baseball League was a household topic.

Every Victorian with even the most remote interest in sports could spiel off the top batting averages in the league and when the Sons of Canada and Travelers met in a sudden death final for the city championship at Athletic Park, the town went wild with excitement.

The two clubs had been the class of the league all through the season and had battled to the final wire with neither club able to take a substantial lead.

SUDDEN DEATH GAME

Finally they ended the season in a dead heat and they were matched in a one-game, winner-take-all battle for the city crown.

Fan interest was evenly divided between the two popular clubs. A flip of a coin established Travelers as home team and it appeared that the fans who packed every corner of Athletic Park were about to see the game of their lives.

They certainly did see the game of their lives, but not in the way they had anticipated.

Perhaps the best way to describe the unbelievable events that accompanied the game would be to quote directly from the report in the Victoria Daily Times the day after the game.

The Times reported: "This morning Cy Milne and his proteges, the Sons of Canada, woke up and found that they actually were the champions of the Victoria Amateur Baseball League.

LIKE A NIGHTMARE

"For a time there was doubt, for fan and player alike thought that last night's ball game at Royal Athletic Park must have been a nightmare. Sad to relate, however, the thing was actually true. That terrifying spectacle in which 14 errors were made and everything under the sun, moon and stars happened, was staged before the gasping crowd and no-one had strength enough to arise and ask that the police be called.

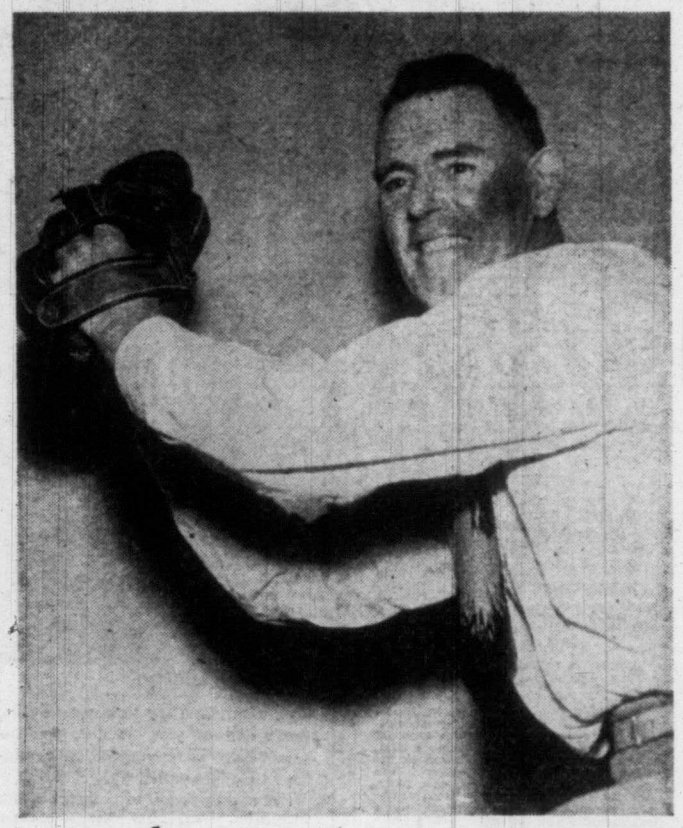
"After five long, weary and boot, ing innings, the Sons won by 16-4. The reason they won over the Travelers was due to the fact they were not as bad as their opponents."

The report continued: "Strong men moaned in torment and beautiful women cried out in anguish but still the striving young athletes in the field carried on with their fooling. The game should have gone nine innings, but for once the fans were glad to see darkness fall for it ended their agony in the fifth inning."

FOURTEEN ERRORS

All in all, the clubs committed 14 errors—five by the victorious Sons and nine by the hapless Travelers.

Ray Parfitt, now a director of the Victoria Tyees, was the winning pitcher, allowing the Travelers seven hits including a tremendous home run by his opposing pitcher, Art Webster.



Now a successful contractor and a director of the Victoria Tyees, Ray Parfitt demonstrates windup he used 25 years ago.

Webster was knocked out of the box in the first inning when the hit-happy Sons scored eight runs. Kim Campbell, the first man to face Webster, clouted a home run and started the landslide to follow. Webster vacated the mound in favor of first base.

It must have been quite a game to see, but now it is just part of the sports history, 25 years ago this week.

ATHLETICS' ACE SHANZ CANNON IN DISGUISE

By MURRAY OLDERMAN

Not so long ago, Dizzy Dean eloquently sized up what makes little Bobby Shantz of the Athletics the big man among major league hurlers.

"If I had a game I wanted to win, then Shantz would do the pitching," said the man who "slud" when he should have "slid," but doesn't have to conjugate verbs to recognize pitching class.

That's more than a gateman at Cleveland's Municipal Stadium could do a couple of years ago when boyish Bobby sauntered up to the clubhouse entrance.

"Scram," growled the custodian. "This is for ball players only."

Bobby had to twiddle his thumbs outside the ball park for half an hour until teammate Sam Chapman bailed him in.

At five feet seven and a wiry 150 pounds, Shantz is one of the smallest pitchers to make the majors, and maybe the best of the little men.

Jimmy Dykes says he's the greatest fielding pitcher he ever saw, and Bucky Harris seconds the statement.

"Only a fool would try to bunt against him," nods Manager Dykes. "In four years only two bunts have gone for hits."

Jumbo, as some of the boys on the A's call him, credits his fine start this season (of Philadelphia's first 24 victories Bobby picked up 12) to improved control and a knuckler which gives him that "extra" pitch in the clutch.

His 212 strikeouts in 214 innings with Lincoln of the Western Association of 1948 prompted Manager Joe Becker of Sioux City to complain:

"There oughta be a law against disguising a cannon in such a small package."

That was Bobby's inaugural season. He won 18, lost 7, and except for a brief, non-pitching tour to Buffalo, he's been up ever since.

In his full-fledged American League debut, Bobby pitched nine no-hit, no-run innings in relief against Detroit, won in the 13th.

"Aw," shrugged the tiny southpaw, "I can do better than that."

By 1951, his won and lost tab was 18 and 12, not bad for a 26-year-old fellow with a sixth-place team.

At Pottstown, Pa., High School and on sandlot teams, Bobby Shantz was an outfielder.

"One day," he recalls, "there was nobody to pitch batting practice. So I took the job. That's how I became a pitcher."

Cultural Centre as King George Memorial?

Music Activity Alone Would Justify Auditorium Says Audrey St.D. Johnson

An article which appeared in a spring issue of Mayfair came to my notice only recently and it makes me pale with envy. "Winnipeg: Where Music Is King," is the title of the article and many of you will have read it.

But how many will have been struck by certain statements which could as well be made concerning Victoria. It is boasted of Winnipeg, that they have a symphony, musical festival, celebrity concert series, an operetta group and numerous choral organizations.

* * *

Victoria can make a comparative boast. Winnipeg is a much larger city, it enjoys a dry-cold climate and a strategical position which ensures it a more lively, vigorous population; it has rich resources in its polyglot citizenry. But by comparison, and relatively speaking, Victoria is equal in the possession of a symphony—three times as long established as the prairie city's—with a popular and proficient conductor, a small but growing festival, celebrity concerts, the Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Society and half a dozen fine choral groups, as well as outstanding school orchestras, bands and choruses.

* * *

But Victoria has not got one important thing that Winnipeg has, and until she has, she will find, as Winnipeg did, that development in the lively arts will be painfully slow, in fact will probably come to a standstill.

The 4,000-seat auditorium and the 1,500-seat playhouse, both city owned, have been, according to concert manager Ed Gee, an important factor in promoting Winnipeg's musical and artistic development.

Adequate facilities for all types of musical and dramatic entertainment, at a cost that allows a fair margin of profit. That is the dream of thousands of Canadian musicians, actors, dancers and music-lovers. That is the dream Winnipeg has realized.

* * *

The prairie city's civic administration converted a crisis and a dilemma to a fine profit and the inestimable advantage of the whole population. The auditorium was built as a works project in time of depression and the playhouse was retained and operated after it reverted to the city for taxes.

In Victoria we are well aware of the need; we are proud of the talent that develops amongst us; we hear with satisfaction of the triumphs of the sons and daughters who have gone afield—John Beckwith, Robin Wood, Irene Byatt, Walter Burgess, Henry Worthington and a number of others who have made careers for themselves in music or in the theatre.

* * *

But we have not begun to explore the possibilities, test the richness of the lode beneath our feet, because the development of most things in this city, outside the realm of sport, has been given little serious consideration. It would surprise some of the authorities and wise business heads in Victoria probably, to know what percentage of the population is interested and involved in musical activity alone.

It is no longer valid to say that concerts pine for lack of attendance. If they pine at all, it is because admission prices are of necessity, too high. But the fact is that all but a very few events were well patronized last season.

Above all, the fact is that more than $100,000 will be raised by debenture for a curling rink; more than $1,000,000 was invested in an ice arena! If those things can be done, it should be possible for a group or a service club to start putting in the foundations of an auditorium that would expand and enrich Victoria's artistic and recreational life, and provide a starting point for additional tourist attractions.

Will those who are seeking it find a more suitable project for a King George VI memorial? I, for one, doubt it.

Children Get Break From Those Piano Lesson Blues

BY DOUGLAS LARSEN

Now comes the revolution in learning to play the piano.

No more hour-per-day practice sessions, with the big switch in the corner as the main inspiration to Junior's music appreciation.

No more do ra mi fa so la ti do, with variations, until the neighbors go raving mad.

And no more Carnegie Hall as the magic goal to lure Junior from the pool table to the parlor upright.

Chief interpreter and prompter of this revolution is fast-talking, energetic Robert H. Whitford of Miami, Fla., president and founder of the International Piano Teachers' Association. The group, with a total membership of 3,000 teachers who claim to have 100,000 pupils, has just had its seventh annual meeting here in the Statler Hotel.

* * *

Says Whitford:

"The old method, of course, was to cross all bridges before coming to them, by practicing exercises on all of the difficulties that might appear in pieces. But we really do not want to learn to play the piano. We want to learn to play pieces on the piano. If you practice an exercise, you have learned an exercise. If you practice a piece, you have learned a piece. The problem is not key pushing, but music making."

He starts his pupils right off on "Yankee Doodle," as a rule. But any other simple tune, like "Ten Little Indians," is okay with him, if that's what they want. If they have a burning urge for boogie woogie, that's okay with him, too.

"If playing the piano is to be the pleasure it should be, then the piece must come first, last and always," he says.

The new attitude of most teachers on how much time a pupil should practice each day is also a drastic change from the old theory, Whitford explains.

* * *

No it's 20 minutes to a half-hour for the younger ones, a half-hour to 45 minutes for the intermediate group, and maybe a full hour for the older, more advanced students. But the practicing need not all be at one sitting.

Another major change in piano teaching, Whitford says, is the goal which is set for the students.

PLAY FOR FUN, HE SAYS: Robert Whitford, who wants to start a revolution in the piano teaching tradition, peers at the busy fingers of two prize pupils, Linda Karen Hall, nine (with glasses) of Foorestville, N.Y., considered top child pianist, and Janice Hall, seven, her sister.

It used to be, he admits, that teachers constantly prodded their pupils toward the concert stage, or a commercial career of playing, regardless of what kind of talent they had. Today the only motive is to get the youngsters interested in playing for the fun of it, and to learn to enjoy playing.

Only when a pupil shows extraordinary talent, nowadays, does a teacher suggest that he consider making a career out of the piano.

* * *

Whitford says this approach is attracting more students than ever before. It's also keeping them interested longer, and at the same time producing just as high a percentage of good artists, he claims.

He thinks the average person can learn to play good, parlor-type music in about three years under the new system.

Whitford, who also composes and publishes music, has himself a kind of side revolution going on in music publishing. He advocates the elimination of sharps and flats for easier reading. A flat note would be diamond-shaped. There wouldn't be any sharps.

However, he admits this revolution might take a hundred or so years to accomplish.

Books and Authors

Communism had nearly five years of uninhibited development in Japan before Gen. Douglas MacArthur drove its top leaders underground in 1950.

The result, as historians see it, was the rapid growth of the Soviet-dominated Communist party in a legal atmosphere provided by the Allied occupation.

A history of the Communist movement in Japan, with special emphasis on the post-war period, has been written by two American scholars, Rodger Swearingen and Paul Langer. They have lived in Japan, know the Japanese language, and have had experience in MacArthur's Tokyo headquarters. Their book, "Red Flag in Japan" (Harvard University Press) is a unique and well-documented study of international Communism. They have dug up enlightening material from both government and Communist sources.

The authors show what Communism in Japan is today—a large and militant movement run by old professionals now in hiding, possessing firm ties with both Russia and Red China, and determined to overthrow the government. Its liaison with the North Korean Communists was so good that it knew of the forthcoming 1950 attack on South Korea more than two months before it started . . .

Nicholas Prychodko is one of the 15,000,000 men sent to Siberia by the Soviet regime for real or fancied offenses against the state. For three years he suffered in Soviet prisons where he was savagely beaten or in a slave labor camp above the Arctic circle.

In "One of the Fifteen Million" (Little, Brown), Prychodko traces his experiences from the time he heard the dreaded knock on the door in the night until he was released from the slave labor camp and eventually made his way to Canada where he now lives.

His story is better than he tells it, the writing being marred by the author's unfamiliarity with the language. But that is a minor flaw, for Prychodko succeeds in his purpose of exposing the life of terror behind the iron curtain . . .

Frank (Abe) Linken was the middle-aged, self-made successful proprietor of the Campus Club, a popular and fashionable New York night club. His wife, Sue, played a big part in his rise to eminence but their life was married by the tragic death of their only child in a coasting accident. At this strategic moment, Abe met and fell in love with pretty, young Mollie Downs, a model, and she returned his ardor. What happend next is the story of "Indian Summer" (Random House), a novel by Robert Sylvester, who gives a new twist to a familiar plot. Sylvester incidentally, shows he has absorbed a lot of inside knowledge on operation of a night club from his years on the entertainment beat for the New York Daily News . . .

George Millar and his wife frequently do what many of their fellow citizens only dream of doing—pack up and go sailing to strange waters and distant lands just for pleasure. They go where fancy strikes and drop anchor whenever and wherever the spirit moves them. In "A White Boat From England" (Knopf), Millar tells with warmth and rich description of his and his wife's adventures while sailing the graceful 16-ton Bermuda-type sloop Serica from the south coast of England to France, Spain, Portugal, Morocco and Gibraltar.

Author Argues U.S. Lost China By Tricks, Treason

"Spies, Dupes and Diplomats," by Ralph de Toledano. Little, Brown & Co., 244 pages.

Reviewed by STUART KEATE

Here is a book which actually lives up to the blurb: "As fresh as today's headlines." The McCarran committee in its recent report found the once-fashionable institute of Pacific Relations guilty of subverting U.S. foreign policy in the Far East. This is Ralph de Toledano's argument in "Spies, Dupes and Diplomats."

Mr. de Toledano, who co-authored a best-seller, "Seeds of Treason," on the Hiss case, argues that America's loss of China was not solely due to State department ineptness, but because of a deliberate campaign of planned subversion to an international Communist spy ring.

Stuart Keate

The author works from unpublished documents and files which (he suggests) the U.S. State department has been anxious to smother. He details the intrigue of Richard Sorge, the master Soviet spy who tipped Stalin on Japan's Pearl Harbor attack before he was arrested; the Amerasia case, in which 1,700 secret documents were stolen from the government and the thieves whitewashed; and the nefarious influences which led to General Stilwell's amazing schism with Chiang.

Among the most interesting propositions put forth by de Toledano is the assertion that war in the Pacific could have been averted. The author documents his statement that a strong anti-war party existed in Japan, under Prince Konoye (and including the Mikado); that Japan was prepared to make extravagant concessions to the U.S. to buck its militarists and that Cordell Hull was the victim of disastrous advice which led his country into an untenable position.

Equally engrossing is an appendix on Owen Lattimore and the O.W.I., which he served as director of Pacific Operations. Mr. Lattimore's conduct before the McCarran Committee is described as "flagrantly defiant of the U.S. Senate . . . outspoken in discourtesy . . . persistent in its efforts to confuse and obscure the facts."

Caught out in several misstatements of fact, the Johns Hopkins professor describes them as "trivial lapses of memory." His writings and his pro-Communist sympathies, on the basis of evidence here submitted, will not strike most readers as "trivial."—S.K.

Simple, Convincing Story Of Indian Boy's Struggle

"The Forest Is My Kingdom," by Janet Carruthers, 239 pages illustrated ($2.50). Publishers, Oxford University Press.

"Finds tongues in trees, books in running brooks, Sermons in stones and good in everything."

Shakespeare might well have spoken these words on the truths to be learned in Janet Carruther's new book "The Forest Is My Kingdom."

In this fascinating story of a young half breed Indian—a story simply and sincerely told — the author reveals her detailed and intimate knowledge of forest lore and animals, and her affection for the Indan people. Her love and understanding for these people and their customs was gained during her years spent among them teaching school in the rugged country in Northern Ontario.

She describes in vivid clear-cut word pictures the wild and untamed beauty of the Lake of the Woods country, where the story takes place, and tells in straightforward and unaffected phrases of the primitive yet wholly satisfying life of the people who live within its peaceful sanctuary and of the serenity that comes from living close to nature in her varying moods.

Bari Bradbrook is the name of the gifted Indian lad who is dominated by one consuming desire—his longing to be an artist. His passionate urge to express all that he sees and feels in drawing pictures of his beloved wild creatures and the pine-woods of his home leads him ever onward.

Often discouraged, he learns from the forest and the lakes the valuable lessons of life, that it is only through work and hardship that the road of success becomes possible.

Here is a book about our own country—Canada—a land of rivers, lakes and forests—a land that has much to give us, must to teach us.

Sensitively yet convincingly written this tale of the experiences of young Bari and his friends is a fine story, and a valuable and educational book for growing children. —M.L.

Beauty Queen Finds Height Big Asset

Beautiful Bess Myerson, a former Miss America, considers her height (five feet ten inches in stocking feet) an important glamor asset. She has made a careful study of the right clothes for her figure, and gladly passes what she has learned along to you. She prefers the flared coat to the fitted (above), and likes to wear hats that silhouette her face, and yet don't look absurdly small (top centre).

Miss Myerson is also extremely conscious of the jewelry she wears. Because she is quite slender, in addition to being tall, she prefers delicate pieces for evening wear (lower centre). Of course, every tall girl knows the problems encountered when shoe shopping. It is no simple matter to find smart-looking shoes. Bess Myerson chooses the basic pump with occasional variations (right).

EDITOR'S NOTE: Bess Myerson, former Miss America, shares her key to successful "tall girl" shopping in this exclusive interview with Beauty Editor Alicia Hart. The famous beauty, now a hostess on the TV quiz program, "The Big Payoff," has made her own height a valuable asset, and she offers a number of fashion-wise and practical ideas that should prove extremely helpful to anyone whose problem is height.

By ALICIA HART
NEA Beauty Editor

How tall is tall? Well, that's a matter of opinion. But if, like glamorous Bess Myerson, you know what it's like to tower over a dancing partner, look for a dress unsuccessfully in the "Misses Department," and try to buy hats that don't add to your height, you no doubt have some very definite opinions on the subject.

"The only way to approach the situation," explains the one-time Miss America, "is to appreciate your tall figure rather than bemoan it."

Bess Myerson certainly is in a position to give advice. Not only has her figure helped her to win the world-famous beauty contest, but in addition it has proved to be a top asset in her television work.

"I admit it isn't easy to find flattering clothes," says Miss Myerson," but after years of studying my figure needs, I have devised my own key to buying."

Starting from the head and working down, Bess Myerson recommends you give a lot of thought to your hats. Many tall women, she believes, pick large styles because they think these hats will somehow or other give the illusion of less height.

"I don't agree!" Miss Myerson states emphatically. "Every extremely tall woman I have ever seen in a large hat looks much taller to me. I, personally have found small sculptured hats much more flattering. They should follow the general contour of your face, and create interest, but not at the risk of overwhelming the observer."

Bess Myerson, who has combined a career and married life successfully, never underestimates the importance of glamor. She feels that all women can achieve a completely feminine look by wearing just the right amount of jewelry with every costume.

For summer wear, she is particularly partial to white and pastel jewelry, and since she is quite slender, she likes rather fragile pieces.

When it comes to picking suits and dresses, Bess Myerson usually chooses a full-bloused effect. She also likes softly flared skirts and wide belts.

"If I can't find what I believe is right for my figure," says Miss Myerson, "I won't buy. I'd much rather wait."

The well-known beauty recommends throat interest to camouflage a too-bony structure. She knows that a tall slender woman's main aim is to add roundness to her figure. Belts, scarves and hip pockets can be a great help.

Since Miss Myerson has a top-to-toe buying plan, she readily recognizes the annoying problem shoes always present to the tall girl. She either has to be satisfied with completely uninteresting styles or pay exorbitant fees for anything that is even mildly fashionable.

Miss Myerson suggests the basic pump as the answer, but adds: "Don't expect cute styles. You won't find them. A classic shoe like the pump can be dressed up or down with a button or bow, and it never overemphasizes your foot."

A born-and-bred New Yorker, Bess Myerson still lives in the big city with her husband and small daughter. Although her youngster is only five years old, her long legs and arms seem to indicate she is destined to follow in her mother's footsteps.

"I think it's wonderful," exclaims Bess Myerson, "and I can hardly wait until she is old enough for me to tell her the facts of a tall life."

COLD CLUES

Watch Health During Summer

Watch out for the summer cold. It can' ruin your vacation, spoil week-ends of fun with your teen-age friends, and generally make life miserable.

The best way to approach the problem of the summer cold, is to do everything possible to prevent it. For one thing, don't get into the habit of hanging around the beach for hours in a wet bathing suit. Keep away from people who are already infected with cold germs. Get enough sleep and eat the proper foods.

But if, despite precautions, you still find yourself a victim of sniffles and sneezes, treat your condition just as you would in the wintertime.

First, take to bed for a day or two so that your system will be assumed plenty of rest and quiet. Citrus fruits and juices are absolutely essential to help you through this trying period.

Bar any additional germs by gargling frequently with a safe, effective antiseptic. If you don't show signs of recovery within a few days, better pay a visit to your doctor.

It certainly takes very little effort on your part to prevent colds during the summer months. But how much more you will enjoy yourself, if you stay well.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Perspiration and constant wear are hard on shoes. Allow your shoes to rest and dry out thoroughly so that they will regain their original shape and consequently give you longer service.

NAIL BITING

Help Relieve Child's Tension

The habit of nail biting, according to leading authorities on child care, can definitely be overcome with a little patience and understanding on your part.

Recognize, first, that no amount of scolding or punishment will do any good. In fact, such concentrated attention may only tend to make the habit more deep-seated.

Painting the nails with a bitter preparation is not much better. If a youngster is determined to bite her nails, she will probably just ignore the taste.

You get much more satisfactory results if you make every effort to keep your youngster well occupied. See to it that she has other little friends of her own age and type to play with.

Find out if she is copying the habit. If she is, don't have her play with the child who is setting the poor example. Perhaps your daughter is overtired and tense because of the wrong kind of activity. Viewing of unsupervised television shows that specialize in violence, for instance, may be causing the difficulty.

Spend as much time as you can with the child during the nail-biting stage. Your warmth and presence will help your youngster outgrow this unpleasant and unattractive habit.

Harvesting Filberts Easy But Profits Small

By C. V. FAULKNOR

"Filbert nuts are a convenient crop, and pleasant to handle," says R. Harold (Bill) Richardson of Holly Knoll farm, Brentwood, "but I would not advise anyone to go into them very heavily."

Faulknor

The reason? Spain and Italy are able to place high grade filberts on the local market at prices far below those of local growers.

The convenience of filberts lies in the fact that they (like most nuts) are harvested late in the season and thus do not conflict with other crops. They are pleasant to handle because harvesting is merely a matter of laying out a tarp and shaking the tree. The real time-consuming chore with filberts is husking, but this can be done indoors under comfortable conditions when inclement weather makes field work impossible.

THREE MAIN CROPS

These advantages are fully appreciated at Holly Knoll. The farm's 15 acres are divided among three main crops: Cherries, filberts and holly, each being harvested at a different time of the year. Cherries finish during the early summer; filberts are gathered in October, well in advance of the first holly cutting at the end of November.

Richardson examining one of his 150 filbert nut trees on Holly Knoll farm.

Until tree plantings reach full maturity farm economy is balanced by inter-cropping with flower crops such as tulips, iris and anemones.

"Bill" and Frances Richardson came to Brentwood from Ottawa about six years ago. A veteran of both wars, Bill was a headquarters army staff officer on leaving the service at the end of Second World War. Both he and his wife take an active part in the farm.

"Frances does a lot more work about the place than I do," Richardson insists.

NOW HAVE 1,150 TREES

Plantings at Holly Knoll now number about 1,150 trees, 250 of these are cherries, 150 nuts and 750 holly. The growing requirements of a filbert and holly tree are very similar. Planting time of each (either in the spring or fall) is chiefly governed by soil conditions; both require well drained land, showing a decided aversion to "wet feet."

In growth habits, however, there is a marked difference. Holly trees are dioecious, there being both male and female trees; while filberts are monoecious, having both pollen and flower-producing organs on the same tree. This should relieve nut growers of the need for planting pollen trees, but such is not the case. Filbert production is complicated by the fact that pollen from one tree generally will not fertilize nut-producing flowers on the same tree. Growers are therefore forced to sprinkle their plantings with trees of a good pollen-producing variety to insure complete fertilization.

CHERRIES RELIABLE

Bill Richardson has high hopes for his unique tree crop combination that keeps the farm in production well up into December. To date, cherries have proved a reliable crop, and Bill has been able to market all his nuts locally. About three years ago he was instrumental in organizing the Vancouver Island Holly Growers' Co-operative Association in an effort to improve the quality of local holly. In his own words: "Since we've taken more care with growing, cutting and shipping our holly, the market has greately improved as to volume and price."

Next Month Is Time to Start Planting Seeds for New Lawn

By CECIL SOLLY

If you are going to plant grass seed this year, the very best time will be during the first two weeks in September. This means that you have only about a month to complete the preparation of the soil before seeding.

Cecil Solly

Recently a reader called me on the telephone, asking what was the best way to be sure of having a good turf quickly. My reply was that he should take a long walk around his neighborhood and look at the lawns there. I then explained that some of the lawns planted last spring were a fine example for what not to do, while others would be in perfect condition, and a credit to the gardener who planted them.

Here was my very good reason for the "take a walk" suggestion:

THE EVIDENCE

By inspecting those lawns, there is an opportunity to see mute, but definite, evidence of success or failure. The next step is to ask the owner of the lawn in question "how come?"

Invariably the reply will be that he took the advice of someone, and without further proof followed their suggestion.

The poor lawn was the result. The lesson, here is, of course, never to take lawn advice from anyone who cannot show you a perfect lawn recently planted under his direction.

There are virtually hundreds of people who have followed the concise instructions given in my lawn book to the letter. You can't miss their lovely lawns when you walk around your neighborhood.

Here, briefly, are the most important points in lawn preparation and seeding:

Fall is the best time to plant because the soil and the rain are warm. Very few weeds germinate at this time. Grass seed is up in 10 days, and long enough for the first cutting in 30 days. Seeds must have a sufficient growing period to become established properly before the cold weather comes.

Most important of all is the preparation of the soil. Mix it least a bale or yard of peat moss to every 600 square feet. Never leave it on top. Always mix peat moss into the existing soil. Rototillering is the cheapest and best method to use. True, this does cost money, but the only other expense you will have is the cost of seed and fertilizer, if you do the work yourself.

FERTILIZERS

There are many different brands of good plant food fertilizers. Use them properly in small doses, little and often, as follows:

When applying humus and right before rototillering, use one pound to each 20 square feet.

After grass has been mown the first time, use one pound to each 50 square feet and no more until spring. Then, at regular monthly intervals commencing in March, use one pound to 50 square feet. This application figure is, of necessity, only general. Use your own good judgment when applying.

If you have to sprinkle often, much of the plant's food will be leached away. If the grass is yellow, you may be using too large an application.

SEED

You will get plenty of weeds in your lawn in any event. Don't buy weed seed. You cannot afford to pay good money for chaff or weed seed, so buy the best seed. It goes further, dollar for dollar, and is by far the cheapest in the end. There are several "tip-top" grass seed blends offered for sale at your favorite garden supply store.

To each 600 square feet (30x20) use one bale of peat moss, 10 pounds of a good plant food and 50 pounds of garden charcoal.

The best results are obtained by spreading the peat moss and rototillering it in, to a depth of six inches. Then, spread the charcoal and fertilizer. Rake this into the top inch with an iron-toothed rake.

SEED PLANTING

After the soil has been properly prepared, and you have bought the best seed, the actual planting is quite simple.

1. Roll and carefully level the area.
2. Scatter the seed evenly.
3. Do not rake: Cover the seed by scattering just enough good earth over it—a fraction of an inch is enough.
4. Roll again to firm the seed in the soil.
5. Water down deep; thoroughly drench the soil. Light sprinklings are of no value.
6. Grass will be up in 15 days. Cut it with a sharp mower as soon as it gets two inches high.

DONT'S

Don't let anyone talk you into skimming the top off an old lawn. It will add to the humus value of the new soil if you turn it under instead.

Don't try to plant a new lawn over "quack grass." Dig it out, roots and all, first.

Don't forget, every soil has some weed seeds in it. If you water the soil this month, most seeds will germinate and the little plants may be killed easily with 2-4-D or a hoe.

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

Q—What is the best method for the propagation of chrysanthemums, and how is it done?—P.C.

A—Chrysanthemums are commonly propagated by cuttings. Follow this method; take pieces 2½ to 3 inches long from the tips of strong shoots. These are placed in a rooting medium of clean builders' sand, vermiculite, or a mixture of 2-3 builders' sand and 1-3 peat moss. Keep the rooting medium constantly moist — not soggy.

★ ★ ★

Q—Will you please let me know what to spray on shrubbery for spider mite?—J.O.

A—Red spider and similar mites can be controlled by spraying with dimite, aramite or vapatone. These should be available at the better garden supply shops.

★ ★ ★

Q—We are being troubled with little white daisies growing in our front lawn. We can not seem to dig them out. Is there any weed killer we can buy that will take care of these weeds?—W.T.

A—The tiny white daisies in the lawn can be readily killed by spraying them with one of the several 2-4-D weed killers recommended especially for dandelions. Spray them on the first warm day in spring and again in three or four weeks.

Garden Hints

If you are growing flowers or vegetables for the fall exhibitions, an extra application of plant food will usually work wonders with them.

During dry weather the rock garden needs watering as much as any part of the garden. Let the sprinkler run on it occasionally. Overhanging rocks sometimes keep the plants under them too dry.

B.C. GOVERNORS AND WIVES

Dewdney Played Big Part in Building Province

By N. de BERTRAND LUGRIN

When Mr. Edgar Dewdney arrived in Canada in 1859 he was in his early twenties. Born in Devon and educated as a civil engineer, he brought a letter of introduction to Governor Douglas, who introduced him to Colonel Moody, R. E., and thus he was started on his career.

His first appointment was as leader of survey party to lay out the town of Westminster. From then on he became one of the front line builders of British Columbia, opening the province by trail, road and rail.

He was a tall, handsome man with pleasing ways and a ready smile.

The Indians looked upon him as a friend. He learned to speak their language and they trusted him.

INDIAN COMMISSIONER

One of the many offices he held was that of Indian Commissioner. He received Dominion wide recognition representing Kootenay in the legislature and later Yale District in the House of Commons.

He was lieutenant-governor of the Northwest Territories when the Riel Rebellion broke out, and finally in 1898 he was appointed lieutenant-governor of B.C. and he and his wife took up their residence in old Carey Castle.

Mrs. Dewdney was a romantic figure. Born on the Island of Ceylon, her father, Shatton Muir, was a rich tea-planter. She was a very pretty little girl and brought up in luxurious surroundings, with a host of servants at her beck and call.

EDGAR DEWDNEY
. . . helped build B.C.

Her father died while she was still a child and her mother married again, a Mr. Glennie. Later the family moved to England and finally to British Columbia where they made their home at Hope on the Fraser River.

LOVELY, SMALL, DAINTY

It was here that she met the young Devonian, Edgar Dewdney, and they fell in love. She was a small woman, hardly reaching to his shoulder, but lovely and dainty in every way, and, we are told, a wonderful helpmate to her husband through every walk of life.

While they were living in Regina, the Marquis of Lorne, then governor general of Canada, used to visit them often. It was a lonesome post and the marquis sympathized with the little lady who, though she tried always to be bright and gay, missed her family and friends in the west. So he made her a present of two handsome St. Bernard dogs for company, and perhaps for protection.

REPRESENTED YALE

When Mr. Dewdney was representing Yale district in the House of Commons, and they were living in Ottawa, Mrs. Dewdney and Lady Macdonald, wife of Sir John, became warm friends, and they enjoyed together the brilliant social life in the capital, of which Mrs. Dewdney wrote in the many letters she has left.

MRS. DEWDNEY
"pretty little girl"

When her husband was appointed governor of B.C. and they returned to Victoria to live in Carey Castle, she was one of the most charming of chatelaines. When their term was over, they moved to Rockland Avenue to a picturesque home which the governor had built. It was well known for its garden in which Mrs. Dewdney took the greatest pride, loving to work among the plants and flowers herself.

Mrs. Allison, who lives in Vancouver, a sister of Mrs. Dewdney, tells a story of a piano which belonged to her sister when she was a young girl going to school in England.

It was a birthday present, and she loved it dearly. So when the family left for Canada by the Royal Mail, via Panama, it was shipped to come round the Horn.

The family arrived in B.C. in August, and three months later the piano was taken from the steamboat's landing by Captain John Irving and brought to Hope.

"It was given a warm welcome, even the two cats we had brought with us recognized it, and purringly rubbed themselves against it. It took its part in all the festivities of the scattered settlement, carried by ox-cart to weddings, dances and other festivities."

Mrs. Dewdney died in 1909 after a long illness and Mr. Dewdney returned to England, living a retired life for some years. In Devonshire he met and married his second wife who was a valued friend and helpmate until his death in 1916.

CABBAGES AND KINGS

Peter Eliot

London's 'Mudlarks' of Seventies Were Proud of Records

The East End of London, which is less familiar than fashionable Mayfair because most literature on London is written about the West End, has a culture all its own. Millicent Rose's new book "The East End of London," convincingly shows that the fine arts have always flourished here.

Here, David Garrick got started. After Ipswich, he chose the East End as his next step to success—it was cheaper and if he failed, it would be less spectacular. He scored a hit on his first night, although not to a full house. Yet in the weeks that followed the East End was invaded by the fashionable West in a manner quite without precedent. Alexander Pope, though old and ill, came three times to see him.

One of the most notorious footpads in the East End was at Hackney. Here is an entry in an old book, typical of the things that went on.

"1752, December 6. As a tradesman was returning to town from Hackney he was attacked near the Shoulder of Mutton by two fellows who robbed him of £15 and his pocket book.

He begged hard to have the last article returned to him and happening to recollect one of the rogues he said to him: 'Honest friend, one good turn deserves another. I was one of the jurymen that took compassion on you last sessions at the Old Bailey when you was tried for a robbery and acquitted though we all believed you to be guilty.'"

To this the thief gratefully replied: 'Curse your eyes, learn to do justice another time and be damned' and immediately made off without returning the pocket book."

★ ★ ★

Most pitiful of all were the "Mudlarks"—the subject, by the way, of a recent novel and movie about Queen Victoria and the young urchin who broke into Windsor Castle.

It's a hundred years now since Henry Mayhew wrote his studies on the London poor. He once organized a meeting of 150 young thieves, mudlarks, toshers (sewer-searchers) and general urchins. Their ages ranged from 19 down to six. "They were as ragged and filthy a crew as ever met in Shadwell," writes Millicent Rose, "and many of them had closely-cropped hair, the sign of a recent release from prison.

Mayhew and his assistants began to taking notes of the boys' occupations and the number of prison sentences they had served. There were loud cheers for the top scorer, a youth of 19 with 29 convictions, and three rounds of applause when it was discovered that, though not all had as yet been to prison, more than half avowed themselves thieves. A plain-clothes policeman was present, and when the boys observed him they demanded his removal; he left in a storm of boos and cat-cails, and the boys settled down to the business of their meeting.

The subjects for discussion were themselves—their lives, their problems and experiences. Several stood up and told their own histories, while the rest listened with sympathy and attention marked by bursts of tumultous laughter and applause."

VIVIAN BLAINE is twinkling on Broadway again in "Guys And Dolls" after having completed her comedy role in "Skirts Ahoy!" at M-G-M with Esther Williams.

CANASTA — JACOBY

Expert Must Watch His Melding

Most Canasta players know that it doesn't pay to put down every meldable card when they are struggling to win the discard pile. Did you ever realize, however, that the same principle may apply even when you are trying to meld out as quickly as possible?

Offhand, it might appear that this is just when you meld everything that you can. Let's take an example to show that appearances are deceptive.

Both sides need 120 for the initial meld, and you eventually put down a joker with four aces from your hand. At his next turn, your partner adds one ace and puts down three kings as an additional meld.

Obviously, you are both playing for a fast out. You have only a six-card hand, so you cannot fight effectively for the discard pile. Your partner has deliberately made an unnecessary meld, so he also is willing to play for out rather than fight for the pile.

When your turn comes, you draw from the stock pile and then hold one king, two queens, two jacks, and a pair of deuces. What should you meld?

Suppose you meld the king, add one deuce to the aces to complete a canasta, meld the other deuce with the pair of queens, discard a jack, and hold one jack. What do you now need to meld out? An ace, a king, a queen, or another wild card.

It would be much the same if you melded the jacks and discarded a queen. Assuming that no queens or jacks have been discarded, this is a toss-up. But don't forget that your discard of a brand new queen or jack may give the discard pile away immediately.

Now suppose you don't meld anything at all. Just discard the king. To begin with, that's a pretty safe discard. It probably won't cost you a pile.

Your partner may draw an ace or a wild card, and may complete the canasta of aces. If he does, you are out at your next turn—no matter what you pick.

If your partner fails to help you, what do you need to meld out? An ace, a queen, a jack, or another wild card. Compare that with the other case—where you needed an ace, a king, a queen, or another wild card.

Canceling out aces, queens, and wild cards (since you need them in either case), we find that a jack will help you if you don't meld whereas a king will help you if you do meld. There are six jacks as against four kings, so the odds are better if you don't meld.

STAMPS — R. NAIRNE

Collecting by Subjects

Judging from its recent issue, Australia seems to have gone off the U.P.U. color standard, which calls for a red stamp for the internal postage rate, green for circulars, etc., and blue for foreign letters.

In Australia the present rate for internal postage is 3½d., so we would expect the stamp of this value to be red, whereas it is purple brown instead. There is a red stamp, but this is the 4½d, reserved for foreign postcards.

For specialists in Australian issues it may be of interest to note that the new 6½d. stamps (both the grown and the green) can be found with a nice re-entry. Stamp No. 76 on the lower right pane shows a doubling of the word "Australia," and in the "o" of "postage."

*

The appearance of new stamps bearing designs featuring flowers, birds, animals, insects, ships, etc., is now almost a weekly occurrence, and reflects the awareness of the various stamp-issuing countries to the present trend on the part of many philatelists to collect by subject rather than by country.

Two of the latest sets aimed to please the topical collector are being issued by Ifni and Mozambique. The first named country, which is practically unknown except to stamp collectors and the people who inhabit it, is a Spanish settlement in N.W. Africa, bordering on the Sahara. It is bringing out a set of 13 stamps featuring the flora and fauna to be found there, and judging from previous issues they should be well produced.

* * *

Mozambique, a Portuguese colony in S. E. Africa, is preparing a set which should outdo the spectacular series it brought out last year depicting the fishes of the country, for this time the butterflies will be shown, in all their natural colors.

While the main reason for all these fancy issues is obviously to sell to collectors, there is no doubt they have a definite educational value. A boy who collects stamps cannot help but acquire far more geographical and historical knowledge than his non-collecting school fellow, with the added advantage that the information is picked up unconsciously while he is amusing himself with his hobby.

* * *

The Great Britain 3d. stamp of 1938, in the deep purple color as originally issued, while still very common in the used state, is getting surprisingly scarce in mint condition. Gibbons has raised the price to three shillings lately, or 12 times face value, and it will probably go higher.

* * *

The figures for the Kenya Royal Visit stamps have now been released. A little over a million of the 10c and less than a third that number of the one shilling were issued. It will be recalled that they were sold out in nine days.

YOU BE THE DETECTIVE

It was 2 a.m. when Professor Oripahs and Detective Shea carefully examined the body of Madeline Style on the stoop of her house in lower Manhattan. The deep, ugly, powder-burned hole through the centre of her forehead had spelled instant death.

"Well, let's have the details again," barked Detective Shea to Ronald Brent, a tall, swarthy man in evening dress.

"Madeline and I had an evening out," Brent declared solemnly. "We had just returned by taxi from a night club when a car drove up. A man leaned out, fired one shot, and Madeline fell to the ground. It was I who called the police."

"Did you recognize the killer, or get the license number of the car?"

"He had a broad nose and an ugly face. All I could see of the license was that it began with the numbers 18. Everything happened so quickly I was stunned."

Officers assigned to search the neighborhood, came back to report they had found a gun in a sewer a block away, with one bullet fired.

"It could be the murder weapon," asserted Detective Shea, "but we'll let the ballistics experts check."

"Was there anyone with you?" asked Professor Oripahs.

"Not when Madeline was shot. When I returned after phoning the police, there were many spectators, but as far as I know, no one touched anything."

"Except you," announced Professor Oripahs. "From your own account, we must hold you for the murder of Madeline Style!"

You be the detective: What clue pointed toward Brent?

Detectives Brent returned the shoe that had been fired from a passing car. In that case, stone walls would have been the victim of the shoe. Stone could not have been powder-burned. Stone had to be the one who fired the shot. (Question: Brent swore no one else had been with them. He stated that he had shot her in anger.)

Reviewing the Records

By HOMER JENKS

If you like Latin-American music, you'll like "Tropic Nights," a new Decca album featuring the sultry voice of Mexico's Elvira Rios. She sings a collection of boleros and waltzes in the caressing style that has made her a favorite in her native Mexico City, Hollywood, New York and Miami.

Jane Froman, whose obstacle-ridden life was dramatized in the recent movie, "With a Song in My Heart," sings eight all-time favorites in her liquid soprano in a Decca "Souvenir Album" Best of the lot are "Lost in a Fog," "Please Believe Me" and "If You Love Me."

JANE FROMAN

Latest of the great operettas of the past to be revived on records is Sigmund Romberg's "New Moon," with its unforgettable "Stout-Hearted Men," "One Kiss" and "Softly, as in a Morning Sunrise." Among others Decca presents Florence George, Paul Gregory and Frank Forest in the solo spots and their voices fit the music perfectly.

Tommy Edwards scores on the singles with a clever novelty, "The Greatest Sinner of Them All" and a pleasant ballad, "Easy to Say." His King Cole-like voice is given excellent backing by LeRoy Holmes and His Orchestra, one of the best recording orchestras around these days. It's on M-G-M.

Larry Herman also gets fine backing from his own orchestra for the lilting ballad, "Want You," with "Until You've Fallen in Love" on the other side (Decca) . . . Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart's Jazz Band play some fine Dixieland in between Roberta Lee's pump vocal choruses on "Busybody" and "Saturday Rag" (Decca) . . .

Theresa Brewer has a cute novelty in "I Hear the Bluebells Ring," with "Kisses on Paper" on the flip-over (Coral . . . Doris Day couples two new ballads, "When I Fall in Love" and "Take Me in Your Arms" (Columbia . . . Dinah Shore also chooses two new ballads for her latest release, "West of the Mountains" and "From the Time You Say Goodbye" (Victor) . . .

The Ames Brothers, a popular new vocal group, offers variety on their two new records, "Crazy 'cause I Love You" and "Star Dust," and "Auf Wiederseh'n Sweetheart" and 'Break the Band That Binds Me" (Coral) . . . Louis Jordan offers a timely novelty, "Jordan for President," paired with "Oil Well, Texas" (Decca) . . . Billy Bowen and the Butterball Four romp through "Diamond Mine in Madagascar," backed by "You Broke My Heart" (M-G-M).

BETWEEN TIMES

By MONTE ROBERTS

As you may have noticed, I have a constant admiration for the female department of this newspaper.

The words they find to describe various vital factors in the feminine life are a constant joy to me, and I often study them avidly.

Take the story in the female department this week headed: "Swathed Hips Huge Sashes For Fall."

At first glance, you might think that means people with huge windows shouldn't stand in front of the sash without first swathing the hips.

On studying the story, though, this first impression turns out to be erroneous.

For the benefit of other males who are interested in the devious ways of the female, I will reprint the story herewith, paragraph by paragraph, and attempt to interpret.

"LONDON—A slender, tube-like silhouette, broken by huge sashes swathed around the hips and dropping from large knots in loose panels, was featured at today's fashion show."

Interpretation: A skinny female with a figure like a hand-rolled cigarette ties bow-knots about her person here and there, with the intention of fooling as much of the public as much of the time as possible.

"This interest in hips instead of shoulders contrasted with Monday's 'la-de-da' look—wide-shouldered and top-heavy."

Interpretation: The dress designer says shoulders are okay, but he's a hip man himself.

"A black velvet day dress with appliqued lace motifs had tie ends which swept round the hips to form a flying panel at the side."

Interpretation: A variation of the old-fashioned end run, or extension play, now known as an end-around sweep, combined with the flying wedge, long since declared illegal. (Females do not believe in playing by the rule book.)

"A long bare-top evening dress was swathed in violet gauze, which poked out in front and formed a real bustle at the centre back."

Interpretation: When this female appears in public, she will start a bustle, all right, in the front as well as the back of the hall; and it will be gauzed by the bare-top.

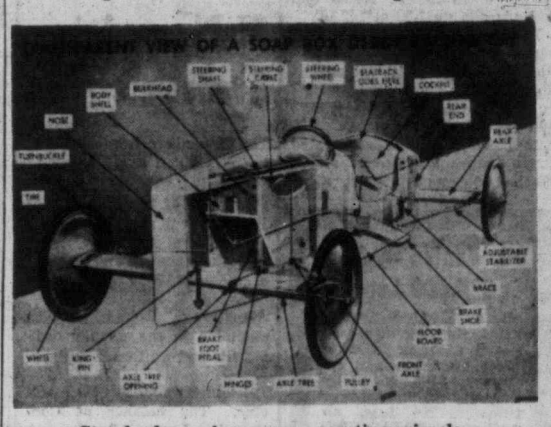
"To an otherwise slim silhouette, Hardy Amies gave a rounded hip line by means of stiffened jacket basques and standaway pockets."

Interpretation: Keep away from my pockets, boys, you bother me.

"He also took original action with the waistline, introducing a new high effect."

Interpretation: This is a little tough to figure out. But if he is planning to take original action with MY favorite waistline, the effect will likely be a high, hard one to the left optic.

Soap Box Derby to Draw Record Entry List for Times V.I. Trophy



Standard soap box racer—coasting miracle.

On Labor Day soap box racers from all over Vancouver Island points will compete in the city's annual soap box derby for the Victoria Daily Times trophy, emblematic of the Island championship.

Co-sponsors of the event for the sleek little racers—Victoria Times, Knights of Pythias and Wilson Motors—expect a record entry list, according to interest already shown in up-Island centres.

Target for all contestants will be Denis Weibel, Port Alberni, who walked off with major honors last year, as up-Island drivers made a clean sweep of all Class A events.

Racing will once again be down Yates Street hill, from final approval by the city council. Original plans to have the coasting classic down Begbie Street toward Jubilee Hospital were shelved when committee members decided that although racing would be excellent, spectators might be injured.

A number of new cars—little mechanical marvels, as the accompanying picture shows—are expected on the course, and as usual there will be some brand new wrinkles.

Last year it was wooden springs, dreamed up in Port Alberni, a red-hot soap box town. This year the Port Alberni youngsters can be relied on to come up with some other construction idea that will make Ormond Street to Cook, pending the gravity-powered bugs roll just a little bit faster than the next one.

Cars must be built by boys who drive them, and within a set price exclusive of wheels and axles. They must come within rigid specifications which cover every point in the accompanying diagram, plus a few that are not listed.

This year the high starting ramp, used to give the super-coasters a flying start, will be extended and modified to permit a smoother takeoff down the course.

The course will also be shortened for the Class B cars, the traditional "soap boxes" not bound by regulations, and the Class B consolation event will be dropped to shorten the program.

Heading the prize list are the Victoria Times trophy and a substantial sum of cash for the Class A winner, and a new bicycle donated by the Knights of Pythias for the Class B leader.

All sponsors will share in rounding out an excellent prize list to provide first, second and third prizes in Class A open and consolation races and Class B, and a worthwhile prize for the driver with the best looking car.

Lime Bay Huts Face Demolition

Council Committee Describes Shacks As 'Menace to Health and an Eyesore'

Squatters' shacks which line the shore of Lime Bay near Johnson Street Bridge will be demolished if City Council, at its meeting Thursday, approves a health committee recommendation.

"We were appalled at conditions," said Ald. Margaret Christie, chairman of the committee which made a personal inspection of the squatter settlement Friday.

She stated notices would be given that the shacks are to be vacated within 60 days and then demolished.

"I feel we are condoning such conditions as long as we leave those shacks there," Ald. Christie said. "They are a menace to health and an eyesore to neighbors.

"It is just not right that they be allowed to remain. There is no sanitation and no running water."

MOVE ELSEWHERE

Ald. Christie stated the committee would try to get other accommodation for the present tenants of the shacks—some 13 men.

"Nobody will be without housing," she added. "We have room at Mountain View for the older men."

The committee's decision followed up receipt of a report on Lime Bay from Dr. J. L. Gayton, city medical health officer. He said there had been constant complaints about the area from the public, with protests increasing recently.

SANITARY REPORT

He said the situation had long been a source of worry to city health authorities and termed conditions "extremely unsatisfactory" from a health and sanitary standpoint.

There are 13 occupants, mostly elderly men. The shacks were built on foreshore property without permission.

Dr. Gayton's letter to the health committee followed an extensive survey and report of the Lime Bay settlement by Lloyd Smith, sanitary inspector and Elwood Gropp, chief sanitary inspector.

THOUSANDS SEE INDIAN CARVE TOTEM POLES

The most photographed man in Victoria is Mungo Martin, Indian totem pole carver at Thunderbird Park, provincial museum officials said today.

A total of 2,375 persons watched the Indian craftsman making a totem pole at the park, it was revealed in a count taken by museum officials. The count is for two full days and amounts to 150 persons an hour.

During that time cameras clicked constantly.

Mr Martin was photographed 675 times by people with ordinary cameras. And 196 persons took movies of him. There were also 93 persons who took pictures of the carver with flash cameras.

"There is nothing like this back home. This is the most interesting thing I've seen in B.C.," said one U.S. visitor.

One man from Texas said: "I thought we had Indian history back home, but we have nothing as interesting and historical as this."

'Bail Out, Fly' His to Decide

Royal Roads Officer Wins M.C. in Korea Flies Plane First Time When Pilot Hit

The 20-mm. shell exploded squarely between front and back cockpits as the Harvard T-6 winged along at 2,000 feet, deep in enemy-held North Korean territory.

The pilot, a U.S. air force captain, was severely wounded and lost control of the plane; and in the rear cockpit Capt. Joseph Tremblay, newly-appointed army squadron commander at Royal Roads, was faced with a terrifying decision:

Should he bail out, or try to fly the plane?

Bailing out was no great problem, for Capt. Tremblay is an experienced paratrooper; but he had never handled the controls of an aircraft.

He spoke to the pilot through the intercom, and a low voice replied: "Try to fly it—I'm out."

In that instant Capt. Tremblay made his decision—and in so doing earned the Military Cross, awarded early this week.

The quiet-spoken, well-knit Canadian of French expression arrived in Victoria Friday to take up his new post at Royal Roads, and this morning told of the "awful feeling" he had on July 1, 1951, as the plane rolled, bucked, rose and fell while he struggled with the controls, trying to remember flight procedures he'd watched while flying passenger.

HEADED SOUTH

Somehow he levelled off the plane. "My first thought was to be sure to go south, not north," he said. "I had no time to read all the complicated instruments in front of me; I remembered I had the sea on my right going north, so I turned the 'plane so it was on my left."

When the aircraft was hit, it was about 75 miles north of Kaesong. Capt. Tremblay hoped to reach Kimpo, 175 miles south.

As the erratic flight continued, he feared the pilot was dead, but he stuck doggedly to his self-imposed task. "Luck was riding with me," he says. "For I hit Kimpo right on the nose."

At that time the pilot regained consciousness. Shell fragments had partially paralyzed him, and he could use only his left hand; but with that, he gave signals to Capt. Tremblay, indicating "turn—let down—level off."

BOMBS AWAY

The pilot also managed to jettison a load of smoke bombs, and wind down the landing gear.

Then Capt. Tremblay came in for a landing. "Of course, I came in the wrong way," he smiled, "There was a big two-place Navy jet fighter taking off, and I missed it by less than six feet. We bounced seventy-five feet in the air, landed again, and crashed through a brick wall.

"The front part of the 'plane burst into flames. I was unhurt, as I had my safety harness buckled tightly. I released it, and dragged the pilot from the plane. He was still living.

CAPT. TREMBLAY

"I guess this took less than two minutes. By the time the crash wagon and the firemen arrived, we were clear of the plane."

He grins reminiscently when he describes the reaction of the two pilots in the navy fighter. "They came back and landed," he said, "and I never saw anyone so frightened. They said it was their worst experience—and they were tough night-fighter pilots.

"They weren't any more scared than I was, though," he adds.

Capt. Tremblay's C.O. telephoned from Brigade Command, about 40 miles away, and said he was sending transport. Capt. Tremblay expected a command car—but instead, another two-place Harvard arrived.

REPORT NEEDED

"I didn't like the idea, but the C.O. wanted me for a report on what I'd seen, to brief the artillery, so I said the hell with it and climbed in.

"After I'd given my report, though, I got drunk."

There are two citations to Capt. Tremblay's Military Cross. The other commends him for a company attack on hills "Jim" and "Bobby," on Sept. 12, 1951, during which he executed a "perfect attack," co-ordinating tanks and infantry.

Capt. Tremblay joined the Canadian Army in 1940, when he attended Royal Military College at Kingston. He went to the First Division when they moved from Italy to Holland, and served with them during the rest of the Second World War.

The army is his life and his career, and, at 31, he claims to be a confirmed bachelor.

Public Hearing On Portage 'Resort' Zoning

Public hearing on an application to re-zone 84 acres in the Portage Inlet district to allow construction of a "resort area" will be held at 10 a.m., Aug. 16 in View Royal Community Hall.

William Porter, chairman of the View Royal zoning board of appeal, made the announcement today.

Plans for the first phase call for construction of a hotel, nursery school, restaurant, chapel, yacht club and convention hall.

The area sought for re-zoning includes the Craigflower Auto Court and extends from the highway east to the inlet and from Admirals Road north to the railway viaduct.

HAD BEEN PLAYING 'BOAT'

Track Star Rescues Lad Adrift On Log

Provincial track star Peter Steward, of Oliver, B.C., swam to the rescue of a small, frightened boy who drifted far out from the shore at Willows Beach Friday night.

The lad, identified as Alan Cusiter, aged about nine, had been playing "boat" on a floating log, and had been so engrossed in his play that he did not notice he was being carried seaward by the tide until he was nearly 200 yards from shore.

Mr. Steward

Then, frightened at his predicament, he yelled urgently for help.

Mr. Steward, a well-known hurdler, who was at the beach with friends, jumped into the sea and began the long swim to the rescue. He pushed the log back to shore with the boy sitting on it.

Alan's anxious mother wasted no time hustling him away to be scolded.

Mr. Steward, staying on holiday here with friends at 243 St. Andrew's Street, learned to swim in the Okanagan River. He was the only one on the beach at the time capable of swimming the distance.

Road Opponent Suggests Alternate Highway Routes

Two "northern" alternate routes for the new Island Highway outlet from Victoria have been explored by J. L. Brown, 1101 Burnside Road, chief opponent of the government-chosen route which makes use of some portions of existing highway.

Mr. Brown surveyed the routes Friday in a light delivery truck and reports they would be more expensive initially than the presently proposed route, "but the maintenance would be negligible."

Here are the alternate routes:

1. Starting at the Chicken Coop restaurant, following the valley in a southeasterly direction south of Florence Lake, then northeast skirting Thetis Lake on the south and then proceeding in a fairly straight line to the north of Knokin Hill to a junction with Interurban Road. The route would then proceed south on Interurban Road through the C.N.R. underpass and then follow the government-proposed routing to Douglas Street.

2. Starting at the Chicken Coop restaurant, then proceeding north of Florence Lake, skirting Thetis Lake on the north and then proceeding in a fairly straight line to the junction of Carey and Wilkinson Roads and then to Douglas Street.

"After a trip by truck over most of the roads in the vicinity . . . the conclusion reached is that to construct the proposed road from Regina Avenue to Parson's Bridge would be a deplorable waste of public funds," said Mr. Brown.

Randall Faces Creditors To Resolve Debt Claims

A Victoria real estate man, George Randall, faced a group of more than 50 alleged creditors at a meeting in the Dominion Hotel here Friday.

Reportedly involved for approximately $175,000 as a result of a series of complex business deals aired recently in court here, Randall called the meeting himself to outline a course of action.

Randall told the meeting that "cold figures never tell the whole story."

"After this meeting," he said, "let's go out of here and forget all the rumors that have been floating around.

"Except for an equity in a cafe and a radio station, my assets that existed a year ago still exist today," Randall claimed.

LISTING UNCLEAR?

Alan Baker, Randall's lawyer, issued a four-page list showing assets and liabilities. But complaint was made that the listing was not clear or complete.

Lawyers for several firms involved in Randall's dealings disputed several of the figures listed and wrangled over settlement procedure.

A series of proposals was finally submitted by Randall.

COURSES OPEN

He suggested that the meeting should decide:

To make no move at all; to appoint trustees to work out a solution; or to force Randall into bankruptcy.

Debate on these proposals however, snarled the two-hour session in a further mass of detail over priority and number of claims against Randall.

After much haggling over the figures presented, Blair Patterson, chairman of the meeting, finally adopted a motion to form a committee of four to explore claims against Randall.

SEEK CLEAR PICTURE

The committee will not rule on claims, the chairman pointed out, but will try to arrive at a clearer picture of liabilities.

It was decided that another meeting will be held on August 29 and that, meanwhile, more complete claims should be sent in writing to Randall's solicitor.

In connection with the proposed submission of claims against Randall, Mr. Baker stated that if unsecured creditors put claims into execution before the next meeting he would advise Randall to file bankruptcy.

Snowsell Backs Island Highway Outlet Plan

Frank Snowsell, Saanich C.C.F. M.L.A., has thrown his support behind the government-chosen route of the proposed new Island highway outlet.

After careful study of the issue, Mr. Snowsell said he has decided the government-chosen route the most practical.

"I consider it quite an achievement because the government only had to buy 25 houses and move four. In a thickly populated area such as the district through which the route travels, I think that is quite an accomplishment," he said.

The M.L.A. said there are other "possible" routes, but they aren't practical.

"I'm speaking from the point of view of a civilian highway. From a military aspect there may be a different story," Mr. Snowsell added.

Mr. Snowsell Friday accompanied J. L. Brown, 1101 Burnside Road, chief opponent of the proposed right-of-way, over a possible route from Prospect Lake Road, along Munns Road and Finlayson Road and down Millstream Road.

He said it is rough country, and not a practical route in his view.

Cowichan Co-operative Curling Association, now building, has now received its certificate of incorporation from the B.C. Registrar of companies.

Directors of the association are J. Lawrence Marshall, president; A. R. Mann, Ronald T. Harper, John B. Waller, J. E. Mould and Dr. W. Douglas McCauley, all of Duncan.

CHINATOWN CALLED 'PRETTY TOUGH'

'Wider' Liquor Laws May Halt Night Orgies

By GORDON FORBES

Wild, all-night drinking parties in Victoria's Chinatown restaurants, now under investigation by city police, are the result of a mixture of antiquated liquor laws and people who don't know how to drink.

This is the general opinion of a number of Victorians questioned on the possible cause of the undesirable conditions.

Ray Whellams, campaign manager of the Greater Victoria Citizens' Association which fought for a negative vote in the June 12 liquor plebiscite, said the Chinatown troubles show the need for a thorough investigation of the entire liquor problem.

"It is more evidence of the need for reform. It is a very regrettable situation," he said.

Mr. Whellams said his group is now gathering information to submit to any government-appointed investigating committee.

Frank Snowsell, C.C.F., M.L.A. for Saanich, said: "We need saner laws and saner citizens. Why must so many people always get drunk when they drink?"

In Europe and Great Britain, he said, there are "wider" drinking laws and drunkenness is less frequent.

Ald. Waldo Skillings said there is no doubt that conditions in Chinatown are "pretty tough."

"It's a wide open show," he said.

The alderman felt existing laws are not conducive to sane drinking.

"Lack of proper supervision seems to be one of the big problems," he said. "Of course some people will drink to excess under any system."

Rev. William Hills, commenting on reports that servicemen were responsible for a part of the rowdyism, said the "obvious solution is a service centre for the boys."

Some sensible system of liquor distribution and consumption also is needed," he added.

Saanich Reeve J. W. Casey declared: "The present laws simply breed conditions like we have in Chinatown."

Mrs. Margaret Harvey, prominent Victoria woman, said proper licensing regulations would help to abolish such conditions as exist in the city's Chinatown.

She recalled she was in Seattle on the July 4 holiday week-end when 3,000 soldiers returned from Korea.

"I didn't see a single case of drunkeness over the whole week-end," she said. "That's because there are sane drinking laws thre."

R.V.Y.C. Craft Ready for Mid-Season Activity

The sail and power fleet of Royal Victoria Yacht Club is nearing the peak of the 1952 yachting season, with major events scheduled this and next week-end. Today boats are competing in an overnight race to Dungeness Light and return, and on Aug. 16 the R.V.Y.C. open regatta will be held, followed by the club regatta dance. Aerial photograph shows yachts at the moorings at the club's Cadboro Bay anchorage.

FARM and RANCH

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A detailed report on sprinkler irrigation experiments which should be of interest to all growers on south Vancouver Island is now available from the Dominion Experimental Station, Saanichton.

The report is the second on the subject to be released by the station. Research workers G. R. Webester, E. R. Hall, R. M. Adamson and J. H. Crossley are responsible for its preparation.

As the report shows it is obvious that irrigation and conservation of soil moisture is the key to successful agriculture on the Island. The rainfall for May, July and August averages only 3.73 inches. During these months 17.62 inches of water is evaporated from a free water surface.

In the report are several interesting facts about irrigation. Among these are: (1) A trash mulch allows more rapid penetration of water and reduces puddling and runoff; (2) Irrigated crops require more fertilizers than non-irrigated crops. Irrigated soils require more organic matter which can be applied in the form of compost, green manure crops, cut hay and manure. (3) Different crops have different water requirements; (4) For most shallow rooted crops an application of one acre inch on sandy soils and 1½ acre inches on clay loams was found satisfactory. These quantities wet the soil to a depth of least 12 inches.

W. R. Industrials Lead Mart

By BURKE CAHILL, Times Business Editor

Industrial investments held the market spotlight this week as shares of big manufacturing companies pushed steadily higher to continue a three-week advance.

On Canadian markets the industrials Friday were several points ahead. Toronto marked an industrial index gain of 14 over three weeks ago.

Cahill

In the same period, Western oils at Toronto showed a rise of five index points.

Market professionals attributed the industrial strength to general business confidence.

Base metals, however, were off at week's end from 200.10 on Tuesday to 198.05 Friday.

Mid-week announcement of a cut in the price of United States zinc largely accounted for the base metals index decline.

STANDOUT

One standout from the general downward trend was Silver Miller, which announced this week that it has a contract to sell 5,000,000 pounds of cobalt to the United States government. The price of Silver Miller rose from $1.88 last Friday to $2.13 yesterday.

A number of other base metal stocks also withstood the general decline.

Golds on the Toronto Exchange closed Monday to celebrate civic holiday, giving brokers a short week. Back to work Tuesday, they traded the greatest number of shares—2,054,000—since May 20. Most sections made cautious advances.

The Montreal Exchange was open Monday and registered a general small advance. On Tuesday industrial weakened, but papers were firm.

Base metals started to slip in Toronto Wednesday. In Montreal industrials and papers also slipped.

Thursday, golds and Western oils showed strength in Toronto and papers pushed ahead in Montreal. Yesterday, industrials and papers continued to rise in Montreal and Western oils moved upward in Toronto.

NEW YORK

On the New York exchange, the week opened with a general decline in prices. By Wednesday, selected stocks began to improve and on Thursday railroads led a general rise. Friday saw prices firm with rails and motors in demand.

From Friday to Friday, the Toronto stock exchange indices showed industrials up 3.92 at 333.04, golds up .62 at 93.80, base metals down .98 at 198.05 and western oils up 1.56 at 142.12.

In the Montreal averages, banks were up .25 at 30.56, utilities down .1 at 88.2, industrials up 3.5 at 223.7, combined up 2.3 at 178.5, papers up 3.55 at 730.95 and golds up 1.28 at 67.29.

In New York, the Associated Press average of 60 stocks climbed 50 cents to $109.70.

Wide Swings Grain Markets Trading

CHICAGO, Aug. 10 (AP)—The drought and official comments on what it meant provided the spark for some heavy trading and wide price swings, mostly on the upside, during the last week in grains.

Many new seasonal highs were registered, soybeans and oats making outsanding gains. The 1952 crops of corn, oats and soybeans brought the best prices of the year. March and May wheat also scored new seasonal tops.

Wheat ended the period ½-2½ higher, corn ½ lower to 1½ higher, oats 1⅛-2¼ higher, rye 3½-5½ higher, and soybeans 7 to 10½ higher.

Post Bloom Plant Care Vital Factor in Perennial Flowers

BY JACK BEASTALL

In recent visits to readers' gardens, the treatment given perennial plants which have finished flowering has been forcibly brought to our attention.

There are many instances where subjects have been cut to soil level as soon as the blooms faded, a practice not to be recommended for the good of the plants.

Our prime purpose in growing flowering plants is for the beauty and color they add to our gardens. As soon as this purpose has been achieved, shabbiness replaces brilliance and we have the urge to remove the offending remainder, although in so doing, we lessen our chances of another glorious display the following season.

Jack

The leaves and stems of all plants function as factories and transportation lines for raw materials and finished food. Soil moisture in which minerals have been dissolved is carried up the stems to the leaves, where, with the aid of sunshine, starches and sugars are manufactured.

These foods are then moved to various points where growth is taking place, or back down to crowns for storage until growth starts next year.

It is important that leaves and stems should remain on the plants until their usefulness is ended, at which time the plants do their own discarding. Leaving the matter entirely in the hands of nature results in the unsightly plants we are so eager to avoid, but there is no reason why we should not give a little assistance and still permit food manufacturing to continue so that good flowering is assured next season.

Instead of cutting our perennials to soil level early in the season, it is better first to remove only the spent blossoms. A few weeks later the stems will have dried out for another six inches or so, and this portion may then be removed. The same will happen again in the succeeding weeks enabling us to remove more of each stem until we finally arrive at the last piece above the crown of the plant.

By using his piece-at-a-time method of cutting back, unsightliness is avoided, without any serious interference with the functions of the plants.

Zinc Price Slump Hits Producers

NEW YORK, Aug. 10 (AP)—Marginal zinc mines in several states last week were reported preparing to close after the price of zinc skidded to the lowest level in more than two years.

Aluminum and ferro-manganese prices advanced, however, as the United States government granted higher ceilings. Copper was unchanged with demand continuing active. Lead held steady despite some market uneasiness resulting from the weakness in zinc.

Zinc dropped 1½ cents a pound to 139½ cents at East St. Louis. The cut was the fourth since the beginning of June and brought the price six cents below the ceiling.

Primary aluminum advanced one cent a pound. This brought ingot aluminum to 20 cents a pound and pigs to 19 cents in the first change since September, 1950.

Price ceilings on ferro-manganese, manganese metal and other manganese metallurgical products were boosted by about $40 a gross ton, on average, to help cover increased cost of imported ores.

Consumers took all the domestic copper output they could get, at the ceiling of 24½ cents a pound, and substantial amounts of foreign metal at quotations ranging up to Chile's 36½ cents.

The National Production Authority this week relaxed several restrictions on use of copper and aluminum. Much more of the two metals now may be used in construction of homes and large projects.

Major metal prices:

Copper—24.5 cents a pound, delivered (ceiling on domestic production).

Lead—16 cents a pound, New York; 15.8 cents, St. Louis.

Zinc—13.5 cents a pound, East St. Louis; 14.33 cents, New York.

Aluminum—20 cents a pound, ingots, shipping point. Pigs, 19 cents.

Nickel—56.5 cents a pound, electrolytic cathodes, Port Colborne, Ontario, U.S. duty included.

Silver—83.25 cents an ounce, New York; 73 pence, London.

Tin — $1.215 a pound, New York.

To Discount U.S. Dollars

Liquor stores in B.C. have started discounting United States dollars offered for purchases by tourists.

Liquor Commissioner Donald McGugan announced the new discount policy Friday.

Government liquor stores will discount U.S. funds to the nearest cent, Mr. McGugan stated, beginning today.

The new liquor purchase ruling for tourists here means that if the official rate for the Canadian dollar is at a premium of, for example, 3 4/10 then the liquor store discount will be three cents. But if the rate is 3 5/10 or higher then the discount will be four cents.

A Government House Ball

Highlight of next week's social calendar in Victoria is the summer ball at which His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Clarence Wallace will entertain on Friday evening at Government House.

Already the ball has created much excitement among feminine guests as they chose their most attractive summer formals to wear for the occasion. Telephones are busy too, as pre-ball dinners, buffet suppers and parties are arranged.

At Government House (Cary Castle in older annals of the province) plans for the gay evening affair have been completed and from the secretary's staff to the gardener, who will bring his choicest blooms to brighten the gracious rooms, everyone is ready and waiting.

The great ballroom, completely redecorated at the time of the visit of the present Queen and her Prince Consort, will make an effective frame for the brilliant scene.

The big room, where Royalty has danced, now has a gold and green ceiling with touches of green-gold in the alcoves. One wall is now entirely of mirrors, eight feet high, which gives the illusion of a room twice as large as it really is. Other walls are tinted in soft ivory.

Magnificent imported crystal chandeliers hang from the centre of the room, each tiny prism catching and holding the light in a scintillating glow.

Chairs, couches and low round seats in the glassed-in sun room and in alcoved spaces around the ball room, are of old gold, upholstered in the same gold tones or in bright cherry red.

Cherry red has been used in the rich velvet drapes at the windows and in the deep velvet carpet on the dais where the orchestra will play for dancing.

His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Wallace are noted for their hospitality and next week's ball will mark another outstanding occasion in the social life of Victoria which has always centred around the governor's residence.

It was during the regime of Arthur Kennedy, in 1865, that Cary Castle, as it was then known, was proclaimed the official residence of the governors.

First ball at the castle was held soon after it was occupied by Governor Kennedy. Attending was Governor Seymour of the neighboring colony, officers of the Royal Navy, Esquimalt, and officials in command of the American base on the San Juan Islands. Dancing was to a "late" hour to the music of the Royal Engineers Band.

Always an outstanding event at Cary Castle until the turn of the century was the Queen's Birthday Ball. Each year dignitaries of the city attended this gay function and current debutantes made their official bow to society.

As the years moved on more and more social affairs took place, each succeeding lieutenant-governor playing host to many distinguished guests.

It is just possible that there may be officers of the Royal Navy at next Friday's ball at Government House, for H.M.S. Sheffield, wearing the flag of the Vice-Admiral Sir William Andrewes, K.B.E., C.B., D.S.O., Commander-in-Chief of the American and West Indies Station is visiting here and will not leave until the end of next week.

The ball will also mark the first social appearance of the newly-elected Premier W. A. C. Bennett and Mrs. Bennett with members of his cabinet and their wives.

Dancing will commence at 9.30 with Len Acres and his orchestra playing the program.

Mrs. Clarence Wallace, wife of the Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia, will be the charming hostess at the Government House ball next Friday evening. (An R. H. Marlow picture.)

It is of rose-petal pink nylon georgette over a full underskirt of the same petal pink. Wide bands of the georgette outline an overskirt extending from a short peplum in the front to a deep V at the back, the same wide bands outlining the bodice misted in fine black French lace. A black French lace stole is worn off-shoulder and extends in graceful panels, floor-length.

It's About Time You Were Introduced to a Miracle!

By PENNY SAVER

When the bathtub starts rocking on its foundations and the sink or wash basin looks as though its going to fall off the wall, that is the time you need to be introduced to a miracle tub caulk that will put things back on an even keel.

It does a beautiful job—permanently!

What you do is squeeze bright, white tub caulk right out of the tube onto the place desired. It looks just like toothpaste.

Caulk around sinks, tubs and showers quickly and neatly. This amazing new product dries within one hour to a tight waterproof seal that won't shrink or crumble. It keeps its white satin-smooth finish even after repeated use of harsh scouring powders.

Use it for waterproofing around shower stalls. Use it between window or door frames and tile or plaster walls. Use it for filling cracks between bathtubs or sinks and walls.

The tub caulk is all plastic and remains sufficiently pliable to stay in joint—it does not contain lime, cement, plaster of Paris or drying oils usually found in conventional sealers.

The tube is $1.29.

Man and Wife Must Share Problems, Also Pleasures

By ELIZABETH B. HURLOCK, Ph.D.

In marriage, as in every other human relationship, there should be fair play. What the husband does should be duplicated, in part at least, by the wife. That is the way the wife who wrote the following letter is beginning to believe:

Hurlock

(Q)—"I have been married four years and have two children. My husband and I get along well. The only time we argue is about his going out. Do you think I'm selfish in believing that three or four nights a week is a lot? I never go out because I must stay with the children. He has a lot of fun with the fellows without responsibility and they call me down when I object to my husband's going out so often. Am I bearing down too hard?"

(A)—Of course you are not bearing down too hard on your husband. His role as a husband and father is not limited to providing for his family. He also owes you companionship and a share in the responsibility of rearing your children.

You have been more lenient than most wives in a similar position would be. Your husband goes out for more than most young married men do or could afford to do. With two young children and a wife to support, is he in a financial position to spend money for pleasure so often?

There will be many more years ahead of you when you will be tied down with your children. This is the time to make your husband realize that the responsibility for them is partly his.

Make a bargain with him that he can go out two or three nights a week with his friends if he stays at home with the children at least one evening a week while you visit relatives or friends, or go to a movie with some of your friends. Then, in addition, have him stay with the children part of the day when he is not working so you can shop or do other things you want to do.

Couldn't you have a friend take care of your children occasionally in the evening so you and your husband could go out together?. You could return the favor by taking care of their children. Husbands and wives should have some fun together even when there are children.

Dr. Hurlock is author of 12 books in psychology. Her advice in this column is free. Write her in care of this newspaper.

Use Light Hand to Prepare Tossed Salad; Fresh Greens, Seasonings

"Sallett" is an old name for salad, a favorite dish hundreds of years ago. It is said that Roman emperors were served dressed lettuce on plates of gold, with radishes sliced so thin that the gold gleamed through. The French and Spanish borrowed the custom of mixing greens with oil and herbs from the early Greeks and Italians and they, in turn, brought salads to America. Today, such salads are still favorites and quite often they are tossed or mixed right at the table.

It has been said that the esthetic chef pours his heart and soul into a salad. Perhaps this is why a salad so often reflects the personality of the person that makes it. A cautious, methodical person will follow the recipe to the letter, but one with an adventurous spirit will experiment with everything and anything on hand. Some prefer to use simple, familiar ingredients, while others will use an exotic mixture of herbs and spices.

Home economists say that there are two schools of thought in regard to the preparation of tossed salads. One claims only greens should be used, the other that practically any combination of vegetables is permissible. It is preferable that the vegetables should be raw, but cooked, canned or frozen ones may be combined with the fresh. Those who prefer only greens sometimes add onion or pepper rings and thin slices of radish or cucumber for extra flavor.

SALAD GREENS

Greens are the basis of any tossed salad. Use only fresh, crisp greens kept cold, clean and dry. As soon as they are brought into the kitchen, remove the outside damaged leaves and store in a tightly covered vegetable crisper or plastic bag in the refrigerator or other cold place. Wash the greens as they are needed; be sure to dry them thoroughly, for wet greens dilute the dressing and give the salad a watery taste and soggy appearance.

Several types of greens can be combined for delicate flavor and color contrast. Lettuce, both head and leaf, is probably the most common green. The fresh "peppery" flavor of watercress lends character to any salad and curly endive gives a different appearance and texture. Red, green or Chinese cabbage, spinach, Swiss chard, parsley, celery and nasturtium leaves are other greens that can go into the tossed salad bowl.

The home economists point out that rules for preparing salads are few and simple but they make all the difference in the world between a fresh, crisp salad and a soggy one. First, tear, rather than cut, the greens into medium-sized pieces. A salad which has large, straggly lettuce leaves is most difficult to eat. On the other hand, pieces that are too small lose their identity so it is best to choose a happy medium. Always combine a tossed salad lightly, using two forks, to keep the greens fresh and crisp—never mix or stir them. Use only a small amount of dressing and serve the salad as soon as the dressing is added to keep it from getting soggy and wilted.

Add interest to tossed salads by using the right seasonings and accompaniments, so say the home economists. From the French we get the idea of rubbing the bowl with garlic although some prefer to add the garlic to the dressing. For those who do not like garlic, onion or onion juice can be used instead. Add other seasonings, like curry powder, cloves, nutmeg, horseradish, Tobasco or Worcestershire sauce to the dressing for extra flavor. Roquefort-type cheese or small pieces of bacon sprinkled over a tossed salad add that special "something." Another trick is to add salad croutons. To make them, add two garlic cloves to one-quarter cup of oil and let stand two or three hours until the oil is well flavored. Then marinate tiny bread cubes about three-eights of an inch in size in the oil and place them on a cookie sheet. Toast them for about five minutes under the broiler, turning frequently.

Have you some sour cream in your refrigerator? What are you going to do with it? Why not season it with a little pepper and salt and use as a salad dressing? It is perfect on coleslaw or sliced cucumbers.

School Days Ahead!

It comes as a jolt to realize that the first day of school is less than a month away.

For many it will be the first time they have attended school, for others it will be a step into high school.

Any time now mothers will discover that last year's togs don't fit as well as they might and there is the problem facing them of what to buy their young folk for the school term.

Local merchants have thought this over carefully, too, and have a selection of clothes to suit every age group and every mother.

The first day in the classroom with new friends will be met with ease if the mother, when choosing an outfit, thinks of the likes and dislikes of the children as well as economy, quality and durability.

High school entrants will have it clearly in their mind what clothes they want and more than likely money earned at summer jobs will buy most of these outfits so parents will not have too much of a problem there.

At top, left, are ensembles to delight any young woman in high school, whether she is entering her first or last year. Miss Valerie Stephens, left, anticipates school opening wearing a fine check skirt styled in straight lines with cuff pocket effect at the hips. The skirt is complemented with a twin sweater set, popular through all the seasons. Her friend, Miss Diane Abernethy, models an extremely smart outfit for the high school girl. The grey flannel skirt is highlighted by black ribbing which creates a "tulip" pocket. Her long sleeved grey pullover could be topped with the navy blazer complemented with an artistic crest.

Half-way through grade school, these young ladies at top right are entering grade six this term. Pat Walls, right, is pictured in a Crawford tartan outfit in viola. The pleated skirt has an adjustable zipper at the waist so it can be tightened as much as is needed. The silk blouse, touched with lace, is topped with a tailored weskit of matching tartan.

Julie Banfied points out that arithmetic isn't as hard as you might think. She is wearing a practical serge tunic with smart white shirt. A neat and practical purchase for any young girl.

Little Wendy Lovitt, bottom left, is reassured by the friendly hand of Ricky Gonder as they walk up the school stairs with Diane Hodgkinson, who will also be starting school for the first time.

Wendy is very happy in her gabardine trench coat with matching felt hat. Little girls love trench coats because they are just like the ones the "big girls" wear. Ricky is proud of the long trousers to his grey flannel suit with matching cap. When he removed his jacket he had a navy "V" neck wool sweater and nylon shirt with plaid tie to show off. Rayon and wool have been combined to fashion this school dress of fine grey check for Diane. It is touched with bright red velvet to match her red double-breasted flannel blazer trimmed with white cord.

They typify the bright young children who will walk into a new world when the calendar turns to September.

Two Fall Coat Silhouettes for Young Girls

The coat silhouette for tots, school girls and sub-teen girls falls into two categories, the loose coat, slender line, and the fitted model.

Great fullness of the pyramid coat is gone. Lines are slim and somewhat straight in this type of coat. Backs are broad and armholes deep. Slight fullness is concentrated on the sides.

The dressy coat is fitted, an important detail to the junior-high and high-school miss. Hemlines are flared and waistlines snug. Collars are crossed, softly looped or button snugly beneath the chin. Turned-back cuffs or crushed and tapered effects adorn sleeves. Yokes, pleated backs and button trimmings please young fashionables.

In the tweeds the heather tones are nicely flecked with color. The browns, beiges, spice and chocolate tones are good. Wine reds and plum, gold and green are next in order of popularity. Striped taffeta, plaid fabrics and corduroys go into linings.

Other coat fabrics include the homespun effects, checked and plaid woollens, deep-pile alpacas, poodles and chinchillas. The blanket fleeces are nice for everyday use. Orlon-fleece models can be washed, rinsed and hung up to drip dry. This fleece retains its fluffy texture. Such a coat is water-resistant.

Teen-Ager Campaign to Break Habit of Biting Fingernails

If you are a teen-ager who bites her nails, why not start an all-out summer campaign to break the habit?

Think how wonderful it would be to go back to school with perfectly groomed, tapering nails. They will make you feel delightfully feminine and even glamorous.

Decide, first, just why you bite. Is it because you don't have enough to keep you busy? Are you overly self-conscious, or are your emotions so rattled that the only way you can keep them under control is to chew at your nails?

Well, at this point in life, you are wise enough to know that you can overcome any of these problems. But if you are at all in doubt, one help is to interest yourself in an extremely active hobby. Turn your attention away from your own problems. You'd be surprised at how easy they can disappear when you are too busy to think about them.

Apply a clear polish to your nails every single day. Naturally, keep them well filed with an emery board. If you are tempted to chew while watching an exciting movie or reading a thrilling book, keep gum in your handbag or on your reading table.

Breaking the habit of biting your nails will take perseverance. You may have to make several new starts before you have the situation under control. But you can do it, and once you see how beautiful your nails can be, nothing in all the world will make you ever want to bite them again.

Children's Shoes Should Fit Well

Proper fitting of shoes can prevent many foot problems. At the present time a great number of adults have some form of foot trouble although nearly all were born with perfect feet. One of every three women, and one man in every four wears too-tight shoes. Friction and pressure cause minor disorders and deformities.

Parents have a great responsibility in seeing that their children's shoes fit properly. School and play shoes which are too short, too narrow or which are stretched to the point of giving little support to the foot and ankle soon can turn a child's perfectly formed foot into one painful with corns, bunions or turned over heel.

Going back to school may be a lark for the college girl, but it's a real trial to the small fry, whether she's returning or just getting started.

That's why, for the small girl on her first day at school, a dress that's fun to wear, in which she feels pretty, is a great aid to morale. It will, just as in the case of her big sister, give her confidence and help her to get through the day with ease.

Join Forces For Safety

Now is the time for all good teen-agers to join forces with their families and make a home-safety survey.

A torn place in the stair covering, a broken board on the porch or a loose brick in the front walk may cause serious injury to a member of the family or a friend.

Make a careful check of all stairways for uneven places in floor boards or worn places in the carpeting.

Suggest to your mother that she use non-skid wax on the floors whenever possible as well as rugs with non-slip bases.

THE DOCTOR SAYS

Anemia May Reflect Other Bodily Ailment

BY EDWIN P. JORDAN, M.D.

Miss B. writes: "I have been doctoring for secondary anemia for three years and can't understand why my blood count never shows any improvement."

Miss B. raises the important problem of a condition which frequently puzzles not only the patient but the physician.

When there are too few red blood cells or not enough hemoglobin, the condition is called "anemia." For example, if a person loses more blood than the system can replace, anemia develops. If the blood loss occurs suddenly, the difficulty can be remedied promptly by stopping the hemorrhage and giving a blood transfusion.

If the loss is slow, it is necessary to find where the bleeding comes from and stop it if possible. If this kind of anemia is severe, it may be necessary to give transfusions or take other steps, including the use of iron preparations—iron being an important part of hemoglobin or coloring matter of blood.

Other anemias are caused by poisons and by diseases. In each case it is necessary to find out not only that anemia is present but what disease or toxic condition is which is responsible for the trouble.

Often the cause can be remedied and the anemia is then likely to clear up. If it comes from a poor diet, eating better food alone may be enough.

One kind of anemia comes particularly, but not exclusively, in women between 30 and 50 years of age. The cause of this anemia is a deficiency of iron due to several things, probably including defective diet and poor absorption due to disturbance of the stomach and intestines.

RESPONDS WELL TO IRON

This results in a feeling of weakness, shortness of breath, nervous disturbances, dry hair, sore tongue and paleness. Fortunately, once it has been identified it responds well to iron.

Failure of the organs which make the blood may produce anemia. In this kind of anemia the difficulty lies principally in the bone marrow and is like that which comes from certain poisons.

Anemia is usually the reflection of something seriously wrong with the body. No one with severe anemia can feel well or can be normally energetic. It is often a trying and discouraging symptom.

Owners Told Must Purchase Radio License

OTTAWA, Aug. 9—(BUP) — Transport Department officials have a word of warning for radio set owners who have not yet paid their 1952 license fees.

Recent reports that indicate the $2.50 license on radio receivers has been abolished "just aren't so," the department says.

An official statement from the office of Transport Minister Lionel Chevrier says that the Radio Act of 1938 still is in full effect.

"Under the act the department is required to collect a set fee from all radio owners and is compelled to prosecute where necessary to enforce the act," the statement said. "Investigations into cases of non-purchase of this year's license are already being carried out by inspectors of the department."

Japan City Marks A-Bomb Anniversary

NAGASAKI, Japan, Aug. 9 (AP) — Church bells will toll and air raid sirens sound today as the citizens of Nagasaki mark the seventh anniversary of the atom bomb dropped on their city.

The A-blast that crushed Nagasaki seven years ago today was greater than the one that pounded down on Hiroshima three days earlier in history's first wartime use of the atom bomb.

But because Nagasaki is built on rolling hills, it suffered less physical damage. About 73,900 persons were killed in the blast and 76,800 were injured or missing.

Like Hirochima, Nagasaki appears to have recovered completely from the blast. Now it teems with more than its prewar population of 200,000.

Persistent 'Vag' Gets Hard Labor

A two-month sentence of hard labor was imposed on Gerald Clanton, no fixed address, when he was brought before Magistrate A. I. Thomas in city court Friday on a charge of vagrancy.

It was Clanton's second appearance on the charge. Earlier in the year he pleaded guilty to the same offense but was given an opportunity to get out of town.

Clanton did not take advantage of the chance.

Detective Norman Bath testified in court today he had observed Clanton's movements for a period of months. Said he had no visible means of support; made no attempt to find employment and maintained no dwelling place.

Clanton, who pleaded guilty, declined an invitation by the court to give an explanation.

Mayor Hume Visits Queen.

VANCOUVER, Aug. 9 (CP)—Mayor Fred Hume of Vancouver is apparently allergic to royalty.

Last October, he slipped and broke his arm while rehearsing lacrosse players for their command performance before the then Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh.

He is scheduled to arrive home Saturday after a month-long European vacation, with one hip taped up.

BRIDGE LESSON

—by Oswald Jacoby

If you want to live by proverbs, you can find one to justify almost any course of action. When East played today's hand, for example, he evidently decided not to look a gift horse in the mouth.

He would have done better if he remembered that it is wise to fear the opponents even when they bear gifts.

South got himself into a bit of trouble by bidding enthusiastically upon his excellent distribution. He cannot be condemned for this, however, since this type of hand will normally produce a safe number of tricks.

West opened the ace of hearts and East signalled with the queen, since he could be quite sure that the king would drop. (West was marked with a five-card suit, so that South could not have more than one heart.) The king of hearts duly dropped and West continued the suit, forcing South to ruff.

Declarer went after the diamonds at once, taking dummy's ace and then losing a trick to West's king. West continued hearts, and South had to ruff again.

South now led the ten of diamonds and discarded the last heart from dummy. East ruffed with the king of spades to knock out South's ace.

South was not pleased with the horrible trump break, but did the best he could by ruffing a diamond with dummy's seven. It was at this point that East fell into the trap by over-ruffing with the jack.

Hoping that his partner had the ace of clubs, East drew dummy's last trump with the queen of spades and then led a club.

South thankfully took the ace of clubs, drew the last trump and ran the rest of the tricks with diamonds. He considered himself very lucky to get away with a loss of 300 points on a hand that had broken so badly.

East should not have overruffed dummy's seven of spades. A club discard would have produced two additional defensive tricks. South would have been obliged to return to his own hand with the ace of clubs, and this would have been his last trick.

If South then led a diamond, for example, East could over-ruff dummy with the six of spades, draw the rest of the trumps with the queen and jack, and then lead a club to his partner.

IN TUNE WITH THE TIMES

By RON BAIRD

British-produced radio plays are taking a firm hold on the American networks as summer replacements and their popularity may well keep some of them on U.S. air when "regulars" return in the fall.

One of the best of these is the Horatio Hornblower series, adapted from the C. F. Forester books by Philo Higley and produced and directed in London by Harry Allan Towers, a young, globe-girdling Britisher whose salesmanship has placed many an English radio program on foreign airwaves.

Heard Sundays at 8 on KIRO, the Hornblower series stars Michael Redgrave, well-remembered in Canada for his starring roles in movies like The Browning Version and The Captive Heart.

Forester, a Briton who now resides in Berkeley, Calif., wrote his first three Hornblower novels in rapid succession in 1937, 1938 and 1939—"Beat to Quarters," "Ship of the Line," and "Flying Colors"—and following the success of these, came "Captain Horatio Hornblower."

Considering his material exhausted, the author then turned to other literary subjects.

But demands from his readers for more of Hornblower reesulted in "Commodore Hornblower" and "Lord Hornblower," then, in a chronological switch, came "Mr. Midshipman Hornblower" and this year's best-seller, "Lieutenant Hornblower."

Being readied by the publishers for 1953 is "Commander Hornblower."

Forester also wrote "The African Queen," the film version of which won Humphrey Bogart an Academy Award "Oscar."

Rhee Charges Enemies With False Stories

PUSAN, Korea, Aug. 9 (Reuters) — President Syngman Rhee charged today that his political enemies had been spreading "fantastic stories all over the world that I attempted to dissolve the national assembly and make myself dictator."

Rhee, 77, was acknowledging his re-election by popular vote for another four years as president. With virtually all election returns in from Tuesday's voting Rhee is more than 4,000,000 votes ahead of his nearest opponent.

South Korean police arrested an anti-Rhee newspaper editor Thursday for publishing reports alleging the Bank of Korea was printing money for use by Rhee's election machine, it was announced today. Police said Hong Chong Il, editor-in-chief of the Chosun Il Bo newspaper, had been arrested for attacking the administration to such an extent as to give "comfort to the Communists."

Denying that he attempted to create a dictatorship in South Korea, Rhee outlined his fight for Korean parliamentary government for 60 years. Rhee repeated that he had not wanted to be president for another term but preferred to work as a private citizen for South Korea's development. "But the people have demonstrated their desire to have me continue the fight," he said.

Rhee is paid an annual salary of about $2,300. The budget also allows him $2,500 in tax-free funds, $5,800 for office expense, and an undetermined amount in a monthly expense account, as well as a rent-free home and a rice ration.

FISHERMAN DROWNS

PRINCE RUPERT, Aug. 9 (BUP) — An Indian fisherman drowned Friday when he fell from a gillnetter off Carlyle, near Prince Rupert.

The victim was identified as 18-year-old Ernest Davis of the Naas River. He was fishing with his brother at the time.

● ● FAIRY STORY

Once upon a time there was a city where all pedestrians stayed on the sidewalk until the light turned green . . .

* * *

● ● NOISY

Wasn't it, in days of yore, Young Lochinvar who came riding out of the West?

My, how things have changed!

Today, it's "The Sheriff" who comes riding out of the East.

He has to come riding out of the East, you know. How can you ride a horse into Victoria from the West, unless, of course, it's a sea-horse?

Anyway, it's "The Sheriff" you hear, with eight-guns (he does things in a big, Western way!) blazing, a-hollerin' and a-whoopin' at five oh five nightly, Monday through Saturday, when he introduces "Musical Roundup" on Victoria's most listened-to station.

We thought you'd like to meet him.

The Sheriff . . .

NORM PRINGLE

His is that authoritative voice you hear calling for "law and order," or singing a plaintive ditty from his native Alberta foothills range-land as he gracefully drapes his "chaps" over the CKDA mike.

Norm actually does hail from Cow-town.

He broke into, or was broken into radio, by the 10-gallon-hatted, spike-heeled-booted Mayor of Calgary himself, Hizzonner Don McKay, at that time, Manager of CKXL.

Master Pringle eventually became Production Manager of 'XL, but after a while, decided to investigate the West Coast.

After a spell at CKMO, he coasted further west, and joined the staff at CKDA a few months ago.

You'll find the initials "N.P." on the station log against other features such as "Treasure Chest" and "Vacation Time," which indicates, of course, that the man is actually civilized, despite "Musical Roundup."

● ● WANDERING

Missing from the 1340 spot on your radio dial these days, is the sly humour of David Hill.

Right now it is being Dave's turn to take some well-earned holidays.

DAVE HILL

The smart boy left for points known only to himself. We won't be able to contact him until he gets back, which, after all, is the only way to go on a holiday.

Eventualities necessitating a call-back have been known to arise before.

● ● OMIGOSH

This is the height of something or other, and we hesitate to say what.

Thursday night last, and the Tyees baseball broadcast has been on the air for about five minutes.

The phone rings.

A voice says "Are you broadcasting the baseball game?"

Puzzled, naturally, we say "Which baseball game?" because back of the voice we can hear Bill Stephenson calling them as they come.

The voice says "The Tyees-Wenatchee game."

We say "Do you mean the game that's on the air right now?"

And the voice says "Yes!"

It actually happened . . .

We ask you . . .

Give heed to . . .

Citizens Supply Reading Matter for Long Sea Duty

Appeal in The Daily Times for magazines and books for the crew of the weather-ships Stonetown and St. Catharines was answered quickly and handsomely by readers. A full truckload of reading material was delivered this week to Stonetown and more is being collected for St. Catharines. Stonetown sails on Aug. 12 for her lonely duties at Station Peter, 900 miles at sea. Officers and men were delighted with the books, magazines and periodicals, and have asked The Times to express their appreciation. And for once, no crew member objected to a little stevedoring duty. Shown loading the books on Stonetown are, left to right: William Hall; E. W. Pinchback; W. G. Smith; Capt. James McMunagle; Monte Roberts, Times marine reporter; Chief Engineer H. B. Brett; R. R. Day, and R. J. Slater. (Times photo.)

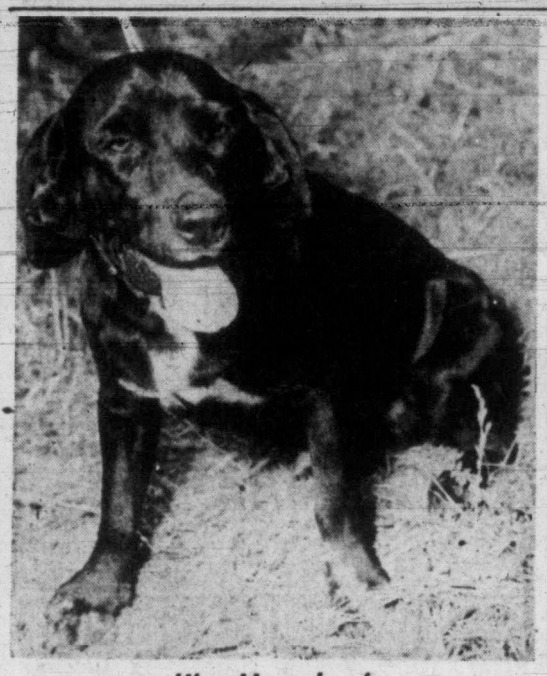
POLICE FEAR TWO MEN LOST IN HALIBUT FISHING BOAT



'I'm Homeless'

"Well, not exactly, because the S.P.C.A. is looking after me until I can find a new master, but the people here would be very happy if someone would drop around and take me home with them. They call me Garvie—I don't know who thought that one up but I suppose they meant well—and I'm 14 months old. My family tree (that's no joke either) shows that I'm part spaniel and part Labrador. They brought me here because I—you'll pardon the expression—'chase chickens,' but I'm sure it's only a passing fancy and I'll grow out of it. However, perhaps the next place I go to won't have any chickens so there's really nothing to worry about. I like children very much and I think they like me. The people here place about 30 dogs a month in new homes. . . . I'm the only guy around here who is still displaced, but if you call me at E 0514, maybe we can get together." (Times Photo.)

Miss Pespi Wins First Heat in Gold Cup Race

Two Seattle Boats and Miss Great Lakes Conk Out; Only Three Cross Finish Line

By DON INGHAM, Times Staff Reporter

SEATTLE, Aug. 9—Miss Pepsi, driven by Chuck Thompson of Detroit, took the first heat of the Gold Cup race on Lake Washington today when the two favored Seattle boats and a third entry broke down.

The twin-engined craft roared around the course, lapping the field and finishing all alone, accompanied only by her own plume of spray. The Seattle-owned Slo-Mo boats broke down half way round the course.

Miss Great Lakes II also conked out, leaving only three boats in action at the end of the heat. More than a lap and a half behind the Pepsi came Hurricane IV. 100 yards ahead of Such Crust IV.

Leading for five laps with the Detroit-owned Pepsi in swift pursuit, the Slo-Mo V slowed suddenly on the south turn of the long oval course on Lake Washington.

TAKES LEAD

Pepsi roared into the lead as driver Lou Fageol pulled the V slowly around the official barge and reported he had blown a cylinder. Thus the defending champion, driven to victory here last year by Fageol, was out of the race entirely.

The Great Lakes was first across the starting line and also first to drop out. Motor trouble left her dead in the water on the first turn of the second lap. She was followed out of action by Slo-Mo-Shun IV, which swung aside after entering the fifth lap, plagued by propeller trouble.

At the start the Great Lake was moving lowly and Fageol came up with a rush to go in front in the first 50 yards. Right on his rudder was Chuck Thompson in the Pepsi and Stan Dollar in the Slo-Mo-Shun IV. Crust and Hurricane were well back and made it a two-boat race for last place all the way.

SUN TO SMILE OVER ISLAND FOR WEEK-END

Almost everyone, with the exception of forest workers, will be in favor of this week-end's weather, as predicted by weatherman William Mackie.

"Temperatures in the high seventies," he anticipates. "Warm and sunny. Light winds," he adds.

"There's a little rain up Prince George way, which could change the picture if it moved down to the coast, but that's highly unlikely."

High today and tomorrow, 80. Low tonight, 53.

U.S. Hits at False Entry By Canadians

100 From Windsor Facing Deportation

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9 (AP) — The United States Justice Department is cracking down on about 100 Canadians it says obtained immigration visas through fraud.

Attorney-General James P. McGranery announced Friday that a deportation hearing will be held next Wednesday at Detroit in one case and "appropriate action" will follow in others. He did not identify the persons involved.

McGranery said an investigation showed the Canadians entered the U.S. and settled in the Detroit area. He said most of their visas were obtained through misrepresentations made to the American consulate at Windsor, Ont.

Visa applications must show proof that prospective immigrants will not become public charges. McGranery said the Canadians aparently falsified information about bank deposits and bank statements.

Contractors Reject L.R.B. Suggestion

Strike-bound contractors on the lower mainland and Vancouver Island today rejected a labor relations board proposal for settlement of the two-months' carpenters' strike.

The contractors met for two hours in Vancouver Friday to discuss the L.R.B. proposal calling for a 10-cent-an-hour wage increase for 3,500 strikers in New Westminster, Vancouver and the northern half of Vancouver Island.

No official statement was made after the meeting. At noon today, however, a spokesman said the Labor Relations Board had been advised of the contractors' rejection.

The spokesman said "the contractors feel there is no economic justification for upward revision of wages at the present time." The official indicated the contractors would hold out for renewal of the 1951 wage rate.

The carpenters' strike, followed by layoffs by the contractors, has made idle 5,000 additional construction industry workers and tied up work on major building projects.

$1,000,000 LOSS IN B.C. MILL FIRE

Four-Hour Night Blaze Wipes Out Capilano Plant at New Westminster

NEW WESTMINSTER, Aug. 9 (CP)—A roaring fire early today destroyed the main mill of one of the largest shingle plants in British Columbia with loss of almost $1,000,000.

Firemen, aided by plant workers, fought unsuccessfully for four hours to control the blaze that wiped out the 30-year-old Capilano Timber Company main mill.

Flames cast a glow in the sky visible for miles. Burning shingles were blown into the air and landed miles away, dangerously close to residences.

About 350 millworkers, who returned to work two weeks ago after a seven-week strike, aided the firemen and some openly wept as they saw their jobs go up in flames.

The 350x90-foot main building destroyed would cost more than $500,000 to replace, W. A. McLellan, president of the company said. The loss also included 18 big shingle machines and miscellaneous machinery, six truckloads of shingles and one truck.

George Walker, night watchman, said there was no sign of fire when the night shift quit work at 1.30 a.m.

EXPLODED IN FLAMES

"I suddenly saw about 40 feet of the mill in flames and called the fire department at 1.42 a.m. The mill seemed to explode into flames."

The mill was working full tilt to catch up on shingle orders for the United States, late because of the strike of the International Woodworkers of America.

Several separate buildings housing boilers and turbines and eight dry kilns were saved.

Firemen report it was the worst fire in the area since 1939.

Men Accept 10c Award

Members of the Victoria local of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers voted today to accept a 10-cent-an-hour pay boost as a means of settling their current wage dispute with B.C. Electric and Hume & Rumble Ltd.

The 10-cent raise was suggested as a basis for settlement by a three-man conciliation board which recently looked into the union-management stalemate.

Companies concerned have yet to announce whether or not they will agree to the 10-cent hike. Word from them is not expected until next week.

Mr. Hamilton raised th' roof, but th' city raised Mr. Hamilton—$1,000.

Ngai Brothers Missing; No Report Since June 8

Two Victorians are missing aboard the halibut fishing vessel Jack Point somewhere along the rugged west coast of Vancouver Island, R.C.M.P. reported today.

Missing are: Roy Ngai, 32, of 128 Superior Street, and his brother, George Ngai, 34, of 933 Caledonia, members of a well-known Chinese family.

Police said the brothers have been unreported since they left Winter Harbor on June 8 for Victoria.

Wreckage found in a small cove near Zeballos is believed to be from the Jack Point. While there is no name on the wreckage, other distinguishing features make identification fairly conclusive, police said.

An officer from the R.C.M.P.'s Zeballos detachment is being sent to the cove to investigate the wreckage.

Mrs. Roy Ngai said her husband and his brother, George, left Victoria aboard their halibut boat about the middle of May for the West Coast of Vancouver Island. She said she had not heard from her husband since then.

"I still think they are safe," she said. "It is not unusual for them to be away for a long time when they are out halibut fishing."

HONEYMOON CAR IN SPIN; BRIDE KILLED

VANCOUVER, Aug. 9 (CP)—A 23-year-old bride of only a few hours died in general hospital today from injuries suffered in an automobile accident on the Hope-Princeton Highway last night.

The victim was Mrs. Jean Babeau of Vancouver. Her husband, Frank, escaped injury when their honeymoon car spun out of control on the highway and rolled over several times.

It was the second fatal accident on the highway in the last three days. William J. Rhodes, of Vancouver, died Wednesday when his convertible rammed into the rear of a gravel truck. Three others were injured.

SOME GAIN, SOME LOSE BY NEW CO-INSURANCE

People who go to hospital for the average short stay will benefit under Premier W. A. C. Bennett's new $1-a-day hospital charge which replaces the old co-insurance charge.

But families where two or more are hospitalized in a year, or where one member sustains a long serious illness will be much harder hit financially than under the previous scheme.

This is because, under the former plan, the co-insurance charge was limited to a maximum of $35 in any one year, no matter how many times a person went to hospital, or how long he stayed. And it was collected only once from a family in a year.

Under the Bennett scheme a person must pay $1 for every day in hospital and every member of a family who goes to hospital must pay it.

The co-insurance charge wiped out by Mr. Bennett provided that a patient must pay (at Victoria hospitals) $3.50 per day for each of the first ten days he was in hospital.

After that there was no further charge.

Part of the reason was to discourage people from going to hospital unnecessarily, just because, as when the scheme started, it was free (except for the premium charge).

The new plan of $1 a day was considered by the Legislature at the time co-insurance was instituted two years ago but was discarded in favor of the $35 maximum scheme.

Here are some comparative examples of hospitalization costs under the old plan and Mr. Bennett's new scheme.

They include the premium costs per year with the co-insurance which would be paid in a year if sickness strikes.

Type of case	Premium	Co-Insurance	Total
Single person who has just a five-day stay in hospital:
Old Charge	$30	$17.50	$47.50
New Charge	27	5.00	32.00
Single person who has three months' hospital in a year:
Old Charge	$30	$35	$ 65
New Charge	27	93	120
A single person going to hospital twice in a year for periods of 30 days and 20 days:
Old Charge	$30	$35	$65
New Charge	27	50	77
A family where mother spends 10 days in hospital for maternity case:
Old Charge	$42	$35	$77
New Charge	39	10	49
A family in which the father and two children are in hospital during the year for 20 days, 15 days and 10 days (a total of 45 days):
Old charge	$42	$35	$77
New Charge	39	45	84
A family in which one member has a serious illness requiring eight months (248 days) in hospital:
Old Charge	$42	$ 35	$ 77
New Charge	39	248	287
An extreme case where three members of a family are hospitalized for three months each in a year:
Old Charge	$42	$ 35	$ 77
New Charge	39	270	309

CITY PLANS $10,000 ACTION AGAINST ENGINEER HAMILTON

A counter suit for approximately $10,000 will be filed in Supreme Court against Charles T. Hamilton by the City of Victoria, A. J. Patton, city solicitor, said today.

Mr. Hamilton, former Arena consulting engineer, Friday filed suit in Vancouver against the city for $9,212.

He claims it is the balance due for engineering services in connection with Memorial Arena.

When the bill was presented months ago the city refused to pay. Instructions were given the solicitor at that time to file a counter suit should a claim be made, Mr. Patton said.

The city contended Mr. Hamilton did not fulfill his contract with the city completely and lists items totalling "possibly more than $10,000," Mr. Patton said.

"The counter suit will be filed in due course," he added.
